1 Choose the correct articles to complete the text.

COCKNEYS

Cockneys are ¹- / the working-class Londoners, especially those born in ²an / the East End of ³- / the city. Cockneys have ⁴a / the distinctive accent when they speak, and they also use ⁵- / a particular kind of slang. ⁶An / The accent includes dropping the 'h' sound from ⁷- / the start of words like 'have' and 'house' and replacing ⁸a / the sound 'th' with 'f' or 'v'. So 'I think his brother has a house in Hampstead,' would become, 'I fink 'is bruvver 'as an 'ouse in 'amstead.' The slang traditionally associated with Cockneys is ⁹- / an unusual form of rhyming slang in which the rhyming word itself is usually omitted. 'Apples' is ¹⁰- / the term for 'stairs' (apples and pears) while 'china' refers to ¹¹a / the friend or 'mate' (china plate). ¹²A / The reason for omitting ¹³a / the key word is not certain, but perhaps ¹⁴- / the original intention was to make it more difficult for other people to understand – for example, if ¹⁵- / the criminals wanted to confuse ¹⁶- / the police.

2 Add definite articles to the sentences which are not generalisations. Tick (✓) the other sentences.

- The river is so polluted that _____ fish have died.
- Antarctica is so cold that _____ trees and _____ plants cannot grow there.
- We love skiing in the Alps because _____ scenery is beautiful there.
- Bengal tigers live in _____ rainforests of south-east Asia.

VOCAB BOOST!

When you come across new phrasal verbs, use a dictionary to find out not only their meaning but also whether they are separable or inseparable. If you record them in a vocabulary book, include an object (sth / sb) where appropriate, and add arrows if the position can change. For example:

to look down on sb = to believe sb is inferior to you to give sth ↔ up = to stop doing a particular activity or eating a particular food

4 Read the Vocab Boost! box. Then find a phrasal verb in each sentence and record it using 'sth' or 'sb' and arrows if appropriate. Add a definition.

- We signed up for after-school yoga classes.

- I haven't seen this film. Don't give the ending away!

- She dropped out of university in her second year.

If at first you don't succeed ...A Stephen King

Stephen King's novels have sold more than 350 million copies and many have been made into films, including The Shining and Pet Cemetery. But his career had a difficult beginning. Having graduated from the University of Maine, King worked as a teacher while also writing his first novel. At one point, he became so frustrated that he threw the manuscript in the bin. His wife, Tabitha, found it, read it and convinced her husband that it was worth finishing. Eventually, he sent the completed work to a publisher and they agreed to publish it. The novel, which was called Carrie, went on to become a best-seller and was made into a successful film of the same name.

B Lady Gaga

At the age of nineteen, Stefani Germanotta dropped out of stage school to focus on her music career, but record label after record label rejected her. Some said she did not look right; others told her that the songs she'd written would never be hits. Finally, one company, Island Def Jam records, offered her a recording contract under her new name, Lady Gaga. She was thrilled. But only three months later, her joy turned to despair when the company dropped her. It took her two years to secure another deal, but when her first album, The Fame, was released in 2008, it was a huge hit.

C Steven Spielberg

As a director, Spielberg's box-office hits include E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial, Jurassic Park, Jaws and the Indiana Jones movies. But when, as a teenager, Spielberg left high school and applied to the University of Southern California's film school, they rejected him because his grades were not high enough. He eventually found a place at a different university and, more importantly, took an unpaid job at Universal Studios. This eventually led to a contract there, at which point Spielberg dropped out of university and began his career as a film-maker.

D Soichiro Honda

Soichiro Honda, born in a small village in Japan in 1906, learned about mechanics as a child by helping his father with his bicycle-repair business. Having dropped out of school at fifteen with no qualifications, Honda moved to Tokyo to work as a mechanic before returning to his home region and starting his own business. But luck was not on his side. His factory was destroyed by bombs during World War II, and again by a huge earthquake in 1945. Honda sold the remains of his business to Toyota and started again. His new company, which initially made motorised bicycles, eventually grew into one of the world's largest car and motorbike manufacturers.

Opinion essay

I can write an opinion essay.

1 Complete the personality adjectives with the words below.

effacing minded narrow self skinned tempered

- 1 self-_____ 4 _____-assured
 2 _____-minded 5 broad-_____
 3 thick-_____ 6 quick-_____

2 Complete the definitions with the personality adjectives below.

gullible placid punctual reserved shrewd spontaneous

- 1 A _____ person is always on time.
 2 A _____ person is clever and perceptive.
 3 A _____ person remains calm.
 4 A _____ person does not show their feelings.
 5 A _____ person believes anything you tell them.
 6 A _____ person acts on impulse and shows their feelings.

Writing Strategy

When you write an opinion essay, remember to:

- avoid informal words and expressions.
- link your ideas together in a logical way using appropriate adverbs and conjunctions.
- divide your essay into clear paragraphs.
- state your conclusion in the final paragraph.

3 Read the Writing Strategy. Then read the essay and answer the questions.

- 1 Which word or phrase in paragraph 1 is too informal? What should replace it?

- 2 Which of these linking adverbs best fits the gap in paragraph 2? _____
 however indeed instead nonetheless

4 Paragraph 3 should be two paragraphs. Where should the final paragraph begin? Write the first four words.

Do role models help to shape your personality as you grow up?

5 Read the task and think about your opinions. Plan an essay with these four paragraphs:

- 1 introduction
 2 points relating to one side of the argument
 3 points relating to the other side of the argument
 4 conclusion, including your overall opinion

Can a difficult childhood sometimes have a positive effect on your personality?

Although some aspects of your personality are present from birth, the things you experience during childhood undoubtedly have an effect on your character. So if you have loads of bad experiences, what effect does that have?

Sometimes, having to face problems when you are young can make you more thick-skinned. _____, children who never encounter any difficulties or challenges cannot develop the strength of character they will need as adults. In other words, you only become self-assured by discovering that you can cope when things go wrong. If nothing ever goes wrong, how can you become self-confident?

However, while certain challenges in your childhood may help to build a strong character, very traumatic or upsetting events may cause lasting damage. For example, a child who suffers violence at the hands of adults may grow up to distrust everyone. Consequently, they might be unable to form normal relationships or lead a happy life. For people like this, a difficult childhood would certainly not have a positive effect on their personality. So to sum up, I believe that a certain amount of difficulty during childhood can have a positive effect on your personality by making you more confident and determined. However, a traumatic childhood would probably cause damage to your personality and make it difficult to become a happy, well-balanced adult.

6 Write your essay (220–260 words) using your notes from exercise 5.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Investigative journalism

I can predict the kind of information I need to listen for.

Revision: Student's Book page 23

1 Complete the text with the words below.

dig around ethics gruesome gutsy infiltrate revelations scandal tip-off

In 2014, Singaporean investigative journalist Zaihan Mohamed Yusof published a book called Foul! It contained startling ¹ _____ about how criminals were paying footballers to 'fix' matches by playing badly. This helped the criminals to win money by betting on the other side. The book caused a big ² _____ in Singapore when it came out, and it called into question the ³ _____ of the billion-dollar sports betting industry.

It all started when Zaihan received a ⁴ _____ about the problem and decided to ⁵ _____ for more information. In the end, he managed to ⁶ _____ a Singaporean criminal network that was fixing matches in places as far away as South Africa. Zaihan's car was vandalised twice by criminals during his investigation, and he also received ⁷ _____ death threats – but he's a ⁸ _____ individual, and the threats didn't deter him from investigating. His book and newspaper articles have led to many arrests, but sadly the problem of match fixing continues.

- Those doors lead to the King's private chambers.
- Pray tell us all what you're thinking.
- Why did you steal out of the house late last night?
- Her eyes had a bluish-grey hue.
- We would be happy to receive you at our house.
- It's hard to explain my sensations at that moment.
- I couldn't hear his words, but I could tell from his earnestness that it was a serious matter.

2 Read the text. Are the sentences true or false? Find evidence in the text for your answers.

- The narrator feels that he understands the woman and her motives. _____
- She asks him a question which surprises him. _____
- The woman and the narrator have a common acquaintance. _____
- The narrator is unhappy with his own social status. _____
- The woman loses her trust of him during the extract. _____

We set our faces towards London, and walked on together in the first still hour of the new day – I, and this woman, whose name, whose character, whose story, whose objects in life, whose very presence by my side, at that moment, were fathomless mysteries to me. It was like a dream. I was too bewildered – too conscious also of a vague sense of something like self-reproach – to speak to my strange companion for some minutes. It was her voice again that first broke the silence between us.

'I want to ask you something,' she said suddenly. 'Do you know many people in London?'

'Yes, a great many.'

'Many men of rank and title?' There was an unmistakable tone of suspicion in the strange question. I hesitated about answering it.

'Some,' I said, after a moment's silence.

'Many' – she came to a full stop, and looked me searchingly in the face – 'many men of the rank of Baronet?' Too much astonished to reply, I questioned her in my turn.

'Why do you ask?'

'Because I hope, for my own sake, there is one Baronet that you don't know.'

'Will you tell me his name?'

'I can't – I daren't – I forget myself when I mention it.' She spoke loudly and almost fiercely, raised her clenched hand in the air, and shook it passionately; then, on a sudden, controlled herself again, and added, in tones lowered to a whisper 'Tell me which of them YOU know.'

I could hardly refuse to humour her in such a trifle, and I mentioned three names. Two, the names of fathers of families whose daughters I taught; one, the name of a bachelor who had once taken me on a cruise in his yacht, to make sketches for him.

'Ah! you DON'T know him,' she said, with a sigh of relief. 'Are you a man of rank and title yourself?'

3 Read the extract again and answer the questions.

- What are the narrator's feelings at the beginning?
- Why does he hesitate before answering the woman?
- How does the narrator meet people 'of rank and title'?
- What does the narrator speculate about the baronet?
- Why does the woman want him to walk ahead?

Reading Strategy

Being able to summarise a text will enhance your awareness of how texts are organised and improve your ability to pinpoint the main ideas or events.

- Start by dividing the text into sections. Mark the points where there is a clear change of ideas or events.
- Underline the key points or events within each section.
- Rewrite the key points or events in your own words. Be brief, keeping within the word limit if there is one.

4 Read the Reading Strategy. Then write a short summary of the extract. Write no more than 50 words.

'Far from it. I am only a drawing-master.'

As the reply passed my lips – a little bitterly, perhaps – she took my arm with the abruptness which characterised all her actions.

'Not a man of rank and title,' she repeated to herself. 'Thank God! I may trust HIM.'

I had hitherto contrived to master my curiosity out of consideration for my companion; but it got the better of me now.

'I am afraid you have serious reason to complain of some man of rank and title?' I said. 'I am afraid the baronet, whose name you are unwilling to mention to me, has done you some grievous wrong? Is he the cause of your being out here at this strange time of night?'

'Don't ask me: don't make me talk of it,' she answered. 'I'm not fit now. I have been cruelly used and cruelly wronged. You will be kinder than ever, if you will walk on fast, and not speak to me. I sadly want to quiet myself, if I can.'

GLOSSARY

fathomless = deep and impossible to understand baronet = the title of one type of member of the English upper class humour (v) = oblige, grant someone their wish trifle (n) = something unimportant

When is it wrong to stop a stranger in the street and ask them something?

Film review

I can write a film review.

1 Read the Writing Strategy and the review. What kind of audience is the TV series suitable for?

- a all ages b teenagers c adults

Writing Strategy

When you write a film review, you aren't being asked to write a straightforward description but to evaluate the film from a particular point of view, e.g. its suitability for a particular audience, how it affected you, or how it exceeded or failed to meet your expectations.

2 Read the review and match paragraphs A–E with descriptions 1–5.

- 1 the main idea behind the series, and its influences _____
- 2 an overall impression and a note to readers _____
- 3 casting and the main characters _____
- 4 introducing the series and giving some basic facts _____
- 5 information about the setting and plot _____

3 Replace the underlined words in the review with the correct form of the words and phrases below.

be disappointed by enhance rave reviews short-listed superbly cast

4 Complete the sentences with the highlighted words in the review.

- 1 The character of Jack in your play is _____. He behaves just like all detectives in films.
- 2 Dreamworks' latest _____ film cost $65 million to produce.
- 3 The view from here is wonderful. It's just _____!
- 4 It isn't a _____ film – there isn't much action at all.
- 5 In the cinema this week there's a _____ new horror story by the director of Watching from the Shadows.
- 6 The film is a very _____ emotional drama. It makes a lot of people cry.

A language school wants to buy DVDs of a popular TV series for students to borrow and watch in their free time. Write a review of a TV series that you like, mentioning why it's a good series and who it would and wouldn't appeal to.

5 Read the task, then plan your review. Make notes.

- 1 From what point of view are you writing the review?
- 2 What kind of TV series would be suitable?
- 3 What are the strong and weak points of the TV series?
- 4 Who would it appeal to?

Something for everyone in CREEPY new sci-fi series

- A The second season of American TV series Stranger Things has just begun. The first season received ¹a lot of praise from critics after it was released in 2016. It has won several awards, including a Screen Actors Guild Award, and was ²considered for many others.
- B The series is set in the 1980s in a small town called Hawkins, Indiana. This very ordinary setting ³increases the tension by providing a contrast to the weird events that take place there. The first season begins with the disappearance of a teenage boy. Disturbing events begin to unfold when friends and family dig around for clues, taking us on a nail-biting journey into the unknown.
- C The series concept is designed to appeal to a broad range of viewers, with its mix of gripping investigative drama, chilling supernatural horror and a touch of sci-fi. The formula owes a lot to film directors like Stephen Spielberg and John Carpenter, but it nicely avoids copying them.
- D Many of the leading actors are teenagers, so younger viewers have characters to identify with. Also, most of the teenage and adult actors are ⁴very well chosen – particularly Winona Ryder as the tortured mother of the missing boy. However, I ⁵didn't like the character of the sheriff, who appears very clichéd.
- E To sum up, it's a well-made, big-budget TV series with a powerful concept, a fast-paced plot and some breathtaking special effects. I can recommend the series to both adult and teen viewers – as long as they are prepared for a fright!

6 Write your review.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Have you ...

- organised your review into clear paragraphs?
- given readers a good idea of what the series is about and who it might appeal to?
- introduced and concluded the review?

Reading

Strategy

Read the gapped text first to gain an overall idea of the structure and meaning. To decide which paragraph fits in a gap, read the paragraphs before and after each gap to identify the context. Then read the paragraphs that have been removed, looking out for paraphrasing of vocabulary and connections between people, places and things.

- 1 Read the Strategy above and the gapped text in exercise 2. Follow the instructions in the Strategy to find the paragraph that fits gap 1. What references to 'paper' are made in the missing paragraph? What connections exist between the missing paragraph and the paragraph after the gap?

- 2 Read the text. Match paragraphs A–F with gaps 1–6.

The story of paper

The Gutenberg printing press is regarded by many as the most important invention of the last millennium. Developed in Germany in the 1440s, the new machine revolutionised printing and brought about far-reaching changes in Europe. However, the press would never have existed were it not for a much earlier invention: paper.

1 _____

Paper soon spread to the Arab world from Asia, but it did not take off in Europe because of a preference for parchment. Made from animal skin, parchment was rather expensive, but as there were so few people who could read and write at the time, this was not considered a problem.

2 _____

The first paper was made from cotton soaked in water and chemicals to release cellulose from its fibres. This process is known as pulping, with pulp being the liquid in which the cellulose floats around. Once the cellulose was extracted from the pulp, it was left to dry in long flat sheets that were later cut into pieces.

3 _____

But then disaster struck. The demand for paper in the West caused the supply of cotton and rags to dry up. So short of raw material were the paper mills that they used the bloodstained uniforms taken from dead soldiers on the battlefield to boost production. It was clear that an alternative to cotton was needed.

4 _____

Today, the main raw material is paper itself, due to the practice of recycling. Aptly enough, much of the world's paper recycling takes place in China, the country of its birth. It's a hugely successful process which has helped to keep paper affordable and sustainable. However, new technologies have posed another threat to paper.

5 _____

But then the printer came along, an invention that put paid to the idea. Recipients chose to print out important information on paper as a back-up instead of just saving it on their computers. Paper sales continued to boom and for a while it seemed that paper would be safe.

6 _____

Old habits die hard, however, and some people prefer to read hard copy rather than text on a screen. For this reason, the demise of paper books seems extremely unlikely in the near future. For the time being, paper production will continue, although it will never be as profitable as it was in the past.

- A Over the centuries, paper manufacturing was innovated time and time again with the aim of increasing efficiency and lowering costs. New machines were invented for pulping the cotton and different chemicals were added to the pulp. When paper was at its cheapest in 1702, the first daily newspaper, The Daily Courant, appeared.
- B The 'paperless office' was first predicted in the 19th century by Thomas Edison. The concept gained momentum in the 1970s with the advent of computers, which would make it possible to visualise documents on a screen. Thanks to the new machines, paper appeared to be doomed.
- C Developed by the Chinese around 2,000 years ago, this material was originally conceived for a very different purpose: to cover and protect valuable possessions. Once its potential as a writing medium was discovered, it soon replaced the much heavier bamboo and costlier silk that had previously been used for writing on.
- D Not for long. In 2013, paper sales reached their peak and since then they have been falling due to the expansion of digital technologies. Lower prices have encouraged many to abandon paper books and newspapers in favour of cheaper online versions. It would seem that history is repeating itself, and digital is doing to paper what paper did to parchment at the end of the Middle Ages.
- E At first, paper makers in Europe were blind to the solution in front of their eyes. The Chinese had been using wood to make paper for centuries, and as early as 1719, a French botanist had observed wasps making paper nests by chewing wood. It took another 130 years for wood to become an important source for paper production in Europe.
- F The attraction of paper did not become apparent until the start of the Commercial Revolution in the late 13th century, when a cheaper medium for drawing up contracts and keeping accounts was required. As trade and commerce expanded, parchment was gradually replaced by paper, and Europeans began to manufacture it in earnest.

Listening

Strategy

In a multiple-choice listening task, you should read through the questions before you listen in order to identify what you are being asked to listen for, e.g. a speaker's purpose or attitude or opinion, the gist of an argument or a disagreement.

3 Read the Strategy above. Identify what you are listening for in questions 1–4 in exercise 4.

4  1.11 You will hear two different extracts. For questions 1–4, choose the answer (A, B or C) which fits best according to what you hear.

You hear a woman telling a friend about a book she's read.

- What is she doing during the conversation?
 - expressing her admiration for the author
 - complaining about the unsatisfactory ending
 - admitting her ignorance of the book's theme
- What is the man's criticism of moral issues in a novel?
 - Readers get an unbalanced view.
 - Authors are abusing their position of power.
 - It interrupts the flow of the narrative.

You hear two friends discussing ways of keeping up-to-date with the news.

- Which aspect of TV news do they disagree about?
 - how tedious the programmes are
 - how biased the news is on different channels
 - how talented newsreaders are
- What does the boy think of online newspapers?
 - They aren't very user-friendly.
 - The content is aimed at older readers.
 - They would benefit from fewer photos.

Use of English

Strategy

In sentence transformation tasks, you may need to change the form of a word in the first sentence so that it collocates with the key word. Identify the word and use suffixes and prefixes, e.g. tempt (v) + -ation = temptation (n).

5 Read the Strategy and question. Which words need changing so that they collate with the key word?

As long as I explain the activity clearly, they will know what to do. GIVE

If I _____ the activity, they will know what to do.

6 For questions 1–6, complete the second sentence so that it has a similar meaning to the first sentence, using the word given. Do not change the word given. You must use between three and six words, including the word given.

- We need to decide how we're going to the theatre. MAKE
We need to _____ get to the theatre.
- There needs to be a thorough revision of the guidelines for the treatment of bullies. BE
The guidelines for the treatment of bullies _____.
- By the end of the meeting, the workers had agreed on the next step. REACHED
By the end of the meeting, an _____ about what to do next.
- We didn't intend to return home until the building work had been finished. HAD
We _____ until the building work had been finished.
- There has been a gradual rise in car sales as the economy improves. HAVE Car sales _____ as the economy improves.
- Shona expected a lot more of her new car. LIVE
Shona's new car did not _____.

Speaking

Strategy

In the interview, try to use a variety of advanced tenses, structures and vocabulary to create a good impression and give yourself confidence.

7 Answer questions 1–4 using a variety of advanced language.

- Have you read a good book lately?
- What stories are in the news at the moment?
- How often do you go to the cinema?
- Do you think you'd be happy if you were famous?

Writing

Strategy

In the review task, the target reader and the point of view for which the review should be written will always be specified in the question.

8 Read the Strategy above and the writing task below. Identify the target reader and the point of view in the task.

You see this advert on an entertainment website for young adults:

We're looking for reviews about a performance that you've seen recently. Tell us how suitable the performance was for people your age and make suggestions for how it could be improved.

9 Write the review (220–260 words) for the task above.

4 USE OF ENGLISH Complete the text. Write one word in each gap.

THE NEWTON BOYS

¹ _____ the Wild Bunch, the Newton Boys were a popular group of outlaws operating in the American West, though 20 years later. They weren't ² _____ a famous gang as the one led by Butch and Sundance, but the members were much easier to coordinate, four of the five being brothers. Butch and Sundance's crimes consisted mainly of robberies, ³ _____ did those of the Wild Bunch, but the brothers' speciality was banks. They were ten ⁴ _____ more effective than other gangs, because the fifth member was an expert at opening safes. ⁵ _____ more experience the brothers gained, the more effective their raids became. Targeting nearly 90 banks in total, there were no bank robbers in history ⁶ _____ prolific as the Newton Boys. They were finally caught in 1924, and given much lighter sentences ⁷ _____ those stipulated by the law. All four brothers died much older than Butch and Sundance ⁸ _____, the last one being 88 when he passed away in 1989.

Metaphors and similes

I can use metaphors and similes to make comparisons.

1 Complete the metaphors with the words below.

broken heart bumpy ride disaster area mirror
plain sailing prison

- Once we'd got through the rush hour traffic, it was all _____.
- When his wife passed away, my elderly neighbour died of a _____.
- Her house was a _____ until she had fully recovered from the accident and could walk again.

- He seemed calm, despite his arrest. (cool)
He was _____ despite his arrest.

VOCAB BOOST!

Most metaphors, similes and idioms are listed in a dictionary under the first word in the phrase, e.g. plain sailing, (as) cool as a cucumber, sleep like a log. Expressions with very common words, such as good or run, are listed under the other important word, e.g. (as) good as gold, run like the wind.

4 Read the Vocab Boost! box and the dictionary extract. Then replace the words in bold with an idiom in the correct form.

IDM at 'heart used to say what sb is really like even though they may seem to be sth different: He's still a socialist at heart. break sb's 'heart to make sb feel very unhappy: She broke his heart when she called off the engagement. By 'heart (BrE also off by 'heart) using only your memory: I've dialled the number so many times I know it by heart. close/dear/near to sb's 'heart having a lot of importance and interest for sb from the (bottom of your) 'heart in a way that is sincere: I beg you, from the bottom of my heart, to spare his life. Give sb (fresh) 'heart to make sb feel positive, especially when they thought that they had no chance of achieving sth give your 'heart to sb to give your love to one person have a 'heart! (informal) used to ask sb to be kind and/or reasonable

From Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary 9e, 2015.

- She thanked him very sincerely for all he'd done for her.

- Paul told Holly that he loved only Amelia.

- Women's rights is an issue that is of great importance to her.

- The warm soup made the hikers feel more positive.

- Be reasonable! We don't need to get up at 6 a.m. on a Saturday!

- He told us to learn our lines using our memories before the next rehearsal.

- My sister's boyfriend made her very unhappy when he finished with her.

- She may seem quite sweet, but she's really a radical.

Animal partnerships

I can understand and react to an article about symbiosis.

Revision: Student's Book page 36

1 Replace the standard adjectives in bold with six of the emphatic adjectives below.

captivating daunting doomed frenetic miniscule

Reading Strategy

When you are doing a gapped-paragraph task, read the text quickly, ignoring the gaps, to get a general idea of what it is about. Then read the paragraphs before and after the gap carefully to find out what the topic of the missing paragraph is. Read through the options A–G to find the paragraphs about that topic. Try each paragraph in the gap until you find the one that fits grammatically.

2 Read the Reading Strategy. Then read the first two paragraphs of the text and decide what the topic of the missing paragraph should be.

3 Read through options A–E. Which is the correct option?

4 Read the text. Match paragraphs A–E with the gaps 2–4. There is one extra paragraph. Remember to follow the procedure in the Reading Strategy.

- A While the dogs and their owners experienced a significant rise in what is known as the 'happiness' chemical, no change at all was detected in the wolves or their owners. This could explain the attachment that humans feel for dogs, sometimes treating them like children.
- B The researchers found that all the dogs displayed more brain activity when faced with the reward stimuli than the control. This suggests that dogs actively seek the companionship of humans, probably as a result of their evolution together.
- C Dogs are certainly one of the first animals to ever interact with humans, although at the time as a species of wolf. The first contact was probably made between 30,000 and 40,000 years ago, when a group of Eurasian grey wolves approached a human settlement in search of food.
- D More than 2,300 dogs around the country are helping children to improve their reading. Children who are uncomfortable reading aloud to people are able to practise with a companion who will not judge them, and are more likely to practise words they do not immediately recognise.
- E Much research has been done into the extent of this bond. One study conducted by Emory University in the US has succeeded in demonstrating the sociability of dogs in relation to humans.

Man's best friend

Humans have collaborated with all kinds of animals throughout history, from cows as livestock to horses for transport. So why is it the dog that has gained the title of man's best friend?

1 _____

The modern dog appeared around 20,000 years later. By this stage, a mutual understanding had developed between the two, by which humans provided shelter and protection in return for the animals' help with hunting. From then on, humans and dogs continued evolving together and became increasingly dependent on each other.

2 _____

In the experiment, thirteen dogs were trained to associate three different objects with different outcomes. A blue toy knight signalled verbal praise, a pink toy truck signalled a treat, and a hairbrush signalled no reward, and was a control. During the study, each dog was tested 32 times to monitor its neural activity.

3 _____

No less fascinating is the effect that dogs have had on humans. Scientists at Azabu University in Japan have recently shown that looking into a dog's eyes activates the same hormonal response that bonds us to human babies. Dogs and wolves were used in the research, which involved the owners and the animals staring into each other's eyes for a set amount of time while their levels of oxytocin were monitored.

4 _____

Today, dogs are not just companions, but assistance animals too, helping children with learning difficulties and adults with mental-health issues. In this way, they most definitely fulfil the role of a best friend.

Collaborative task

I can maintain the interaction in a collaborative task and reach an agreement.

1 1.16 Read the task and listen to two students doing the task. Which qualities do they talk about? In general, do they find the quality more positive (+) or more negative (-)?

Quality	more + or -?

Speaking Strategy (1)

In the discussion phase of a collaborative task, avoid repeating the words in the question. For example, when you are asked to discuss advantages and disadvantages, use synonyms for these words:

It's a plus for me having a friend to study with.
I find it difficult to stay focused when I study with a friend, so for me, it's a minus.

2 Read the Speaking Strategy. Then choose the best word below to replace advantage(s) / disadvantage(s).

benefits bonus downside drawback plus pros

- 1 Weighing up the advantages and the cons.
- 2 The disadvantage of ... is ... (while the upside could be ...)
- 3 There are many other advantages to the plan.
- 4 For me, it's a(n) advantage (but for others it may be a minus).
- 5 One major disadvantage is ...
- 6 The added advantage of ... would be ...

3 1.16 Listen again and tick (✓) the phrases you hear.

Which personality trait would affect a friendship the most?

4 1.17 Read the question above and listen to the same students doing the second part of the task. Which quality do they choose? Why?

Speaking Strategy (2)

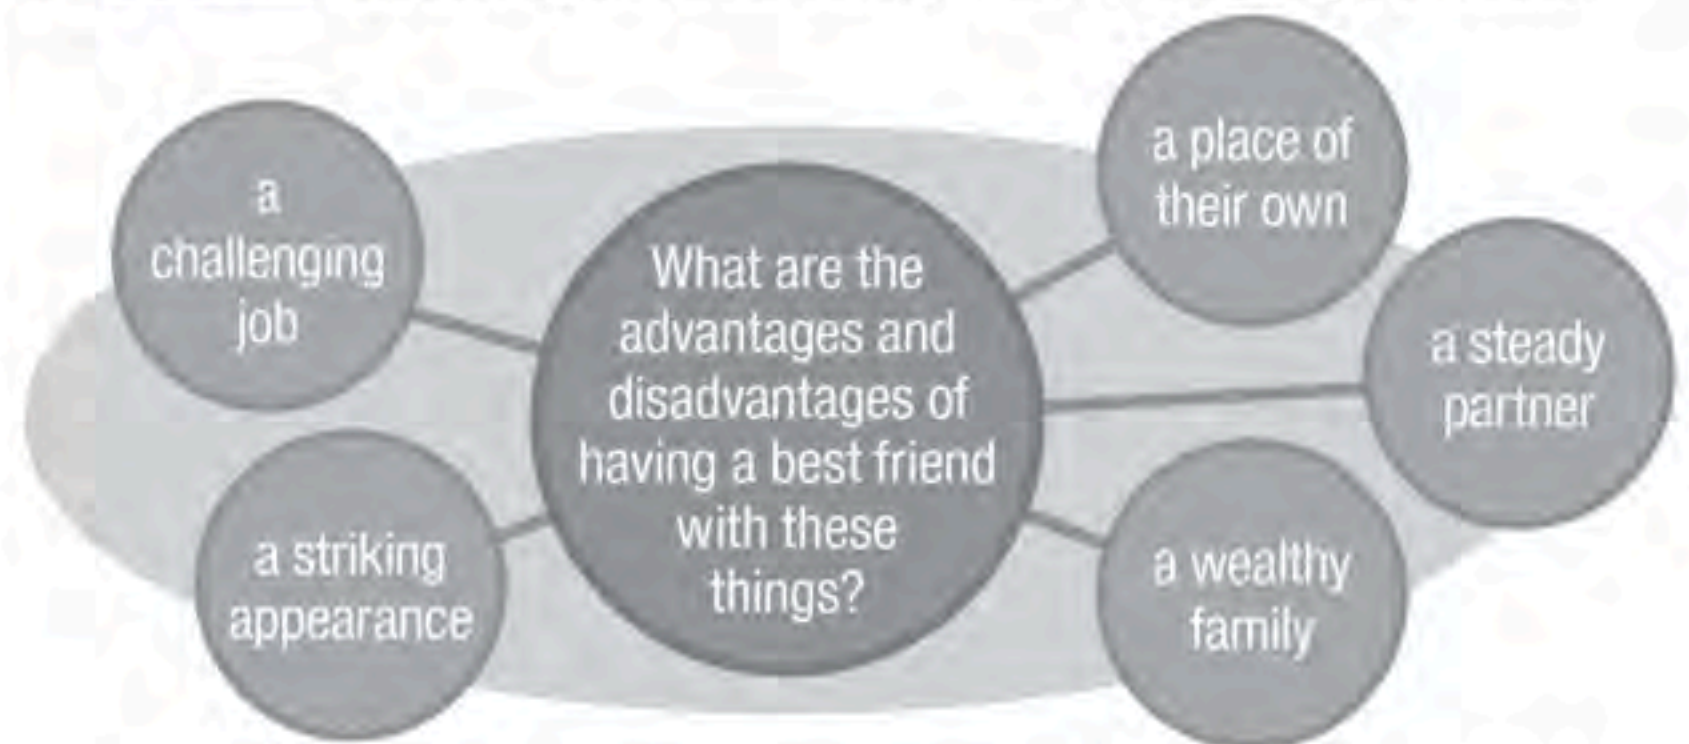

When you are discussing the different options in this task, you and your partner may not share the same opinions. In this case, you should negotiate to try to reach an agreement. You can:

- a disagree politely and justify your opinion.
- b ask for a reaction to the new justification.
- c concede a point.
- d conclude the discussion.

5 Read the Speaking Strategy. Match phrases 1–12 with categories a–d in the Strategy.

- 1 Would you be happier if ... _____
- 2 I can't help thinking that ... _____
- 3 Let's wrap this up, shall we? _____
- 4 Yes, I suppose you're right. _____
- 5 Would you go along with that? _____
- 6 That's one way of looking at it, I suppose, but ... _____
- 7 Fair enough. I can accept that. _____
- 8 So, have we come to a decision? _____
- 9 Maybe, but I just wonder if ... _____
- 10 Good point. I hadn't thought of that. _____
- 11 Which one are we going for, then? _____
- 12 You wouldn't disagree with that, would you? _____

6 1.17 Listen again and tick (✓) the phrases you hear.

7 Look at the task. Make notes about the advantages and disadvantages of each option.

option	advantage	disadvantage

Which characteristic would affect the friendship the most?

8 Read the question above. Make a note of your choice and your reasons.

9 Now do the task using your notes from exercises 7 and 8.

A proposal

I can write a proposal.

You and your classmates feel that your school does not offer sufficient opportunities for students to practise the foreign language they are studying. Write a proposal to the head teacher, describing what opportunities currently exist, suggesting further opportunities for practising the language and saying how your suggestions might benefit the rest of the school community.

- 1 Read the task and the proposal below. How many opportunities to practise a foreign language does the writer suggest?

Speak up!

Introduction

This proposal is intended to outline the possibilities students have to speak their chosen foreign language, make some recommendations as to how the situation could be improved and explain how the improvements might be good for the whole school.

Current situation

Comments made during focus groups show that students do not feel confident about speaking the foreign language they are learning. They mentioned that the only chance they had to practise was when answering their teachers' questions in class.

Key needs to be addressed

Students learning a foreign language should have the opportunity to listen to and repeat new vocabulary to perfect their pronunciation. It would also help if they could practise with a native speaker. What would motivate them even more, however, is the opportunity to interact with foreign students of their own age.

Recommendations

I would like to suggest the following:

- Some language classes should be held in the IT department so that students can use computer software to improve their pronunciation.
- At least one native speaker should be employed in our school to help students with speaking.
- The school should start an exchange programme to give students the opportunity of speaking a foreign language with people of their own age. This would benefit the whole school as it would give all the students a chance to learn about another culture. Also, the teachers could refresh their own knowledge of the language by travelling once a year to the country concerned.

If these recommendations are carried out, the integration of new students is bound to be smoother.

- 2 Put the phrases in the correct group.

Following a survey of ... it was revealed that ...

I recommend that ... There ought to be ...

If these recommendations are carried out ...

In this proposal, I will present ...

Stating the purpose

1 The main aim of this proposal is to ...

2 This proposal is intended to ...

3 _____

Background information

4 Comments made during focus groups show that ...

5 Feedback from ... suggests that ...

6 _____

Making recommendations and suggestions

7 _____

8 _____

9 ... need / should + passive infinitive

Final recommendation

10 Unless these ideas are implemented, it is unlikely ...

11 The results of ... suggest that ... would be the best option.

12 _____

- 3 Which of the phrases in exercise 2 are in the proposal?

Writing Strategy

A proposal follows a clear structure. It has a title and four paragraphs each with a sub-heading.

Paragraph 1: states the purpose of the proposal.

Paragraph 2: gives background information.

Paragraph 3: describes the existing problems.

Paragraph 4: suggests improvements to be made.

- 4 Read the Writing Strategy and the task. Make notes under the headings: Current opportunities, Further opportunities and Benefits to the wider school community.

You and your classmates feel that your school does not offer sufficient opportunities for students to do sport. Write a proposal to the head teacher, describing what opportunities currently exist for students, suggesting further opportunities for them to do sport and saying how your suggestions might benefit the rest of the school community.

- 5 Write your proposal (220–260 words) using your notes from exercise 4.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Have you ...

- followed the structure in the Writing Strategy?
 included phrases for writing proposals?

Reading Strategy

Remember that multiple-choice questions about a text:

- always follow the order of the text.
- sometimes specify what part of the text they refer to by mentioning a paragraph.
- may relate to the overall meaning of the text rather than to a specific part. (If so, this will be the final question.)

2 Read the Reading Strategy. Then look at questions 1–5. Which questions refer to a specific paragraph? Which question refers to the text as a whole?

Your true self

1 Most of us consider our personality to be an integral and unchanging part of who we are, and for decades psychologists have more or less assumed that our main personality traits are fixed by the age of 30. But now mounting evidence is undermining that notion; personality is far more mutable than we thought. That may be a little unsettling, but it's also good news for the almost 90% of us who wish our personalities were at least a little different.

2 There's no doubt that personality is partly genetic, but experiences in childhood also shape our personalities. Research shows that young children become more extroverted and work harder when surrounded by other kids with these traits. Parental behaviour has an impact, too. Jerome Kagan at Harvard University has found that if parents encourage timid infants to be sociable and bold, they grow up to be less shy and fearful.

3 Genes and environment interact in complex ways to shape our personality, and this process doesn't stop when we reach adulthood. It's becoming clear that major life events can have long-lasting impacts on personality at any age. For example, going through a divorce makes women more extroverted and more open to experience, while men become less conscientious, according to one US study.

4 Becoming unemployed can have a dramatic effect on well-being. 'It's probably the life event that has the biggest impact,' says Christopher Boyce at the University of Stirling, UK. And he has found that the impact on personality is twice as big, tending to

 - a psychologists have always doubted.
 - b most people find uncomfortable.
 - c has been undermined by advances in genetics.
 - d is not supported by the results of research.
- 2 According to the study mentioned in paragraph 3, the experience of getting divorced tends to
 - a affect men and women differently.
 - b have a bigger effect than genetics.
 - c make people generally more outgoing.
 - d affect people differently depending on their age.
- 3 The effect on your personality of losing your job is
 - a less dramatic than moving house.
 - b as profound as its effect on your well-being.
 - c the same as the effect of moving to New York.
 - d far bigger than its effect on your well-being.
- 4 The research in paragraph 5 suggests that your personality
 - a becomes more unstable as you get older.
 - b is different at different points in your life.
 - c is more affected by environment when you are young.
 - d only becomes fixed when you reach your seventies.
- 5 Overall, the main point of the text is that
 - a you cannot escape the personality that you are genetically destined to have.
 - b scientists still know very little about how our personalities are formed.
 - c your personality can change during adulthood and you may be able to affect the process.
 - d people are becoming generally more neurotic than they used to be.

make people less conscientious and less agreeable. Moving to a new town or country might influence your personality too – people living in New York tend to be highly neurotic, for example, while Londoners score low on agreeableness.

5 The extent to which environmental factors shape our characters over a lifetime is remarkable. In work published last year, psychologist Wendy Johnson and her colleagues at the University of Edinburgh compared results from personality tests taken by people when they were aged 14 and again at 77. 'We couldn't find any evidence for stability in individual personality characteristics,' she says.

6 There is also growing evidence that we can actively shape our own personality – and would benefit from doing so. Psychologists continue to debate the extent to which personality is plastic in adulthood, but there is now no doubt that it can and does change. And that's good news for all of us. Knowing that you are not 'set' by 30 is empowering. You can think: 'I'm not stuck with who I am. I can change,' says Boyce.

Discussion

I can discuss a topic and express opinions.

- 1 Circle the adjective which has a different meaning from the other two.

- 1 Intelligent robots will cause dramatic / marginal / momentous changes in society.
- 2 Robots will lead to a drastic / marked / minimal reduction in people's fitness.
- 3 For disabled people who want to live independently, robots will bring about a cosmetic / profound / radical improvement.
- 4 Robots would make a radical / subtle / sweeping difference to how much time people have for leisure activities.
- 5 There is only a marginal / minimal / fundamental risk that robots will cause accidents in the home.

- 2 Match the beginnings and endings of the key phrases for acknowledging a point.

- 1 That's a fair ... _____
 - 2 True, but what it really ... _____
 - 3 Maybe so, but what it really boils ... _____
 - 4 Perhaps, although in ... _____
 - 5 I see what you mean, but at ... _____
 - 6 That may be the case, but ... _____
- a my view ...
 b comes down to is ...
 c the end of the day ...
 d point, but I still think ...

- 3 1.21 Listen to two students and answer the questions.

- 1 Which opinion from exercise 1 (1–5) does each student express?
 girl: _____ boy: _____
- 2 Which phrases from exercise 2 (1–6) do the students use?
 girl: _____ boy: _____

- 4 1.21 Read the Speaking Strategy. Then listen again and complete the rhetorical questions used by the students. Write the implied answers.

- 1 But who wants to clean toilets?
Nobody.
- 2 I mean, _____ pets in the house?

- 3 But _____ to go wrong?

- 4 How _____ the future?

Speaking Strategy

When you are expressing opinions, you can use rhetorical questions to emphasise your points. Remember:

- rhetorical questions do not require answers, but you can sometimes add an answer in order to emphasise your view. If you do not give an answer, it must be clear what answer you have in mind:
What have you done to help today? (Nothing!)
Would you let a child watch that video? (Of course not!)
How much time do people waste on the internet? (Far too much!)
- do not over-use rhetorical questions.

- 5 Read the task and the questions. Then make notes.

How will intelligent robots affect what jobs people can do? Will the effect be positive or negative?

What types of jobs will robots be able to do?

Will robots make it harder for some people to find work? Why / Why not?

Are there certain jobs that nobody wants to do? Will robots be able to do them?

Are there some jobs that robots will never be able to do, in your opinion? What are they? Why won't robots be able to do them?

Would it be dangerous to make robots that are more intelligent than humans? Why / Why not?

- 6 Now do the task using your notes from exercise 5.

Letter to an editor

I can write a letter about a local improvement scheme.

1 Read the task and letter below. In which paragraph (1–5) does the writer:

- mention a point in favour of the proposal? _____
- sum up their opinion? _____
- explain the reason for writing the letter? _____
- talk about leisure activities? _____
- mention environmental concerns? _____

You have read about plans to redevelop an area of woodland near your home as a large housing estate. Write a letter to the editor of a magazine explaining your objections to this proposal.

To the editor,

- After reading in your magazine about the proposal to build 1,500 new homes on a site which is currently woodland, I felt compelled to write in order to express my opposition to the scheme. Not only is the proposal unnecessary, but it would also prove very unpopular with the local community, I reckon.
- I do recognise that there is a housing shortage in this part of the country and that a degree of development is inevitable. But important as new homes are, I firmly believe that there are loads of sites in this area which would be better suited to redevelopment.
- The proposed site is a valuable piece of woodland which is extremely popular with off-road cyclists and dog-walkers. At no point have local people had the opportunity to express how much they appreciate this communal facility. It is particularly important to those in the area who are a bit short of money to spend on leisure pursuits.
- I am also pretty concerned about the impact which the proposed development would have on the environment. Cutting down so many trees to make way for housing is sure to have a negative impact both on wildlife and on air quality. Only by protecting our woodlands can we ensure a healthy and attractive environment for generations to come.
- To sum up, I feel that this proposal is entirely unsuitable, and the sooner it is abandoned the better. In no way does it meet the needs of the local community, nor is it sensitive to the local environment. In short, it is rubbish.

Writing Strategy

In a formal letter, in addition to avoiding inappropriately colloquial language, you should:

- avoid using rhetorical questions.
- use inversion to add emphasis: Only rarely have they allowed the public to visit.
- include passive forms to make the style more impersonal.
- emphasise your opinions using formal expressions like What is clear / undeniable is that ..., I have no doubt that ... and I firmly believe that ....

2 Read the Writing Strategy. Then, for each paragraph of the letter (1–5):

- underline one example of inversion.
- find a word or phrase which is inappropriately colloquial and suggest a more formal alternative.

You have read about plans to redevelop a riverside area and popular open-air swimming location into a luxury hotel. Write a letter to the editor of a newspaper explaining why you are strongly against this proposal.

3 Read the task above and think about your objections to the proposal, and one or two points in its favour. Make notes using the prompts below to help you.

Loss of a communal facility

Environment – pollution, etc.

Job opportunities

Tourism – local economy

4 Plan your letter using the letter in exercise 1 to help you.

5 Write your letter (220–260 words), using your notes and plan from exercises 3 and 4.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Have you ...

- written 220–260 words?
- used appropriately formal language, including syntax?
- checked the spelling and grammar?

Reading

Strategy

In the cross-text multiple-matching task, you should read the texts first to determine the general attitude of each writer. As you read, underline parts of the text which give an opinion or an attitude and look for agreement and disagreement between the texts.

- 1 Read the strategy above and the question below. Follow the instructions in the strategy to answer the question.

Which expert has a different view from B about the possibility of producing enough meat in the future?

- 2 You are going to read four extracts from articles in which experts give their opinions on what would happen if the world decided to go meat free. For questions 1–4, choose from the experts A–D. The experts may be chosen more than once.

Which expert

- expresses a different view to A about the range of vegetarian food available.
- shares C's opinion about the impact of giving up meat on one of the world's natural resources?
- has a different view from the others about the effect of global vegetarianism on health?
- has a different view from D about the repercussions on air quality of not keeping farm animals?

Meat-free world

Four experts comment on the consequences if the world suddenly went vegetarian

A Becky Thomas nutritionist

First and foremost, I think we have to bear in mind the health benefits of a meat-free diet. While consuming meat in moderation isn't necessarily bad for you, too much can have a detrimental effect. The World Health Organisation has warned that consuming 50g of processed meat a day greatly increases the risk of cancer. Moreover, a change in the world's eating habits would be good for the environment. We could use our valuable water supply for human consumption rather than having to reserve so much for the cattle we keep. Turning to more practical issues, supermarkets stock a variety of meat-free options these days, and it's much easier to eat out. In general, the pros of giving up meat far outweigh the cons, so I fail to understand why more people don't do it.

B Nigel Bentley environmentalist

While it's clear that a vegetarian diet can prevent harmful medical conditions, a meat-free diet might become a necessity in the future. World population is set to exceed nine billion by 2050, which would entail having to produce 200 million tonnes of meat, which would be completely impossible to produce. If the current rate of population growth continues, we will be obliged to reduce our meat intake and we may have to become vegetarians, because the meat industry will become unsustainable. Of course, a smaller amount of livestock would also have a far-reaching effect on the planet: there would be a massive fall in greenhouse gas emissions, because there would be fewer cows releasing huge quantities of methane into the air.

C Kiera Reed anthropologist

What concerns me most about a meat-free world is the effect it would have on our ability to resist illness. A vegetarian diet would not necessarily give people the nutrients they have until now obtained from meat, which would lead to more sickness and disease in the world. At the very least, people would require education about where to find these nutrients elsewhere. There are an estimated two billion undernourished people in the world today, but that figure would only grow if we all became vegetarians. Having said that, keeping fewer animals would help us save water. Apparently, giving up meat for one day saves the same amount of water used daily by nine people. There are so many different aspects to world vegetarianism, that it is difficult to say whether it would benefit us or not.

D Michael Townsend chef

While I accept that a meat-free diet may reduce the chances of developing certain illnesses, I wonder whether people might be exaggerating the effect it would have on the environment. Regarding the pollution generated by agriculture, surely, the fumes from a greater number of harvesting and processing machines would outweigh the lack of gases produced by cows? As for struggling to produce enough meat to feed the world's population, there are several cultures that have a meat-free diet, so less meat would be needed than certain figures suggest. I am sure the food industry could cope with the increase in meat production. The thing that worries me most is the lack of choice at mealtimes. For me, the pleasure of dining is in contemplating the variety of wonderful dishes available. If the world became vegetarian, there would only be salad on the menu!

Listening

Strategy

In the sentence-completion task, the answers are usually the exact words you hear on the recording. However, the wording of the questions paraphrases the actual recording. Read the question carefully and listen for what they are paraphrasing to help you identify the correct answer.

- 3 Read the Strategy and the short extract and complete the sentence below. How are the words around the gap paraphrased in the extract?

The Dead Sea has not lost its appeal for tourists, despite the fact that it is shrinking. However, hotels that were built on the lake in the 1980s now lie around 2 km from its banks. To reach the current water level, visitors have to climb down some rocks, cross a busy main road, make their way through a line of marshy plants and pass over a vast mud flat.

Hotel guests must negotiate a number of obstacles to arrive at the Dead Sea, including a wide expanse of _____.

- 4  1.22 You will hear a talk about the changes experienced by the Aral Sea. For questions 1–8, complete the sentences with a word or short phrase.

A Changing World

Covering parts of Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan, the Aral Sea used to be roughly half as big as ¹_____. Before it began to disappear, fish from the lake were distributed all over what used to be ²_____. The water supply to the Aral Sea was interrupted when the rivers were redirected for the ³_____ crop. A system of dams, reservoirs and ⁴_____ was built to irrigate the land. As the level of water in the lake dropped, the amount of ⁵_____ rose. Part of what used to be the South Aral Sea has turned into a ⁶_____. The North Aral Sea has been saved by the construction of a new ⁷_____. Today, the North Aral Sea offers nearby residents more ⁸_____ and jobs than in recent years.

Use of English

Strategy

In the open cloze task, some gaps can be filled by referring just to the immediate phrase or sentence surrounding the gap. However, others require understanding of the paragraph or whole text. Always read through the text before you attempt the task to make sure you understand the story or message.

- 5 Read the Strategy above and the text in exercise 6. Choose the sentence which best summarises the message of the text.
- Scientists have found a less painful method for diabetes sufferers to obtain blood for testing.
 - A new technique has been developed which will improve the lives of diabetes patients.
 - A recent medical discovery is likely to prolong the lives of people with diabetes.

- 6 Complete the text with one word in each space.

A medical breakthrough

Diabetes is a medical condition patients can live with ¹_____ that they check their blood sugar levels regularly. This is usually done by pricking a finger and placing a drop of blood on a testing strip attached ²_____ a meter. But now, a team of researchers at Harvard and MIT have come ³_____ with an alternative method for checking the blood. Using a special ink, they have developed a kind of tattoo that will make the process much ⁴_____ invasive in the long term. Not ⁵_____ does the ink detect the presence of sugar in the blood, but it is also able to track other substances. Too much glucose and the tattoo turns brown; an excess of sodium and it goes green. Pinks and purples indicate a change ⁶_____ pH levels.

The main advantage of the new method is that diabetes patients won't have to ⁷_____ extracting blood for testing any more. For this reason the tattoos will probably catch ⁸_____ quickly once they have passed all the necessary medical trials.

Speaking

Strategy

In the collaborative task, you may need to use the following techniques to speculate about the prompts:

- use synonyms of 'think': I reckon, I suppose
- use modal verbs of speculation: must, might
- use verbs that indicate impression: look, appear
- use set phrases: there's a chance, in all probability

- 7 Read the Strategy and add examples to the techniques.

- 8 Work in pairs. Do the task below. Use the ideas in the Strategy to speculate about the prompts.

How might these changes affect a teenager's life?

- going to school abroad for a year
- acquiring a motorbike
- having a new baby brother or sister
- inheriting some money
- starting a new school

Writing

Strategy

When you write a proposal, you will be expected to demonstrate appropriate use of two or more functions in your answer, such as describing, expressing opinion, giving reasons, persuading, or recommending. These functions will be specified in the task.

- 9 Read the Strategy above and the task below. Which functions from the Strategy are specified in the task?

Your local council is concerned about the rising number of young people hanging around the streets at night in your town. Write a proposal for the council in which you outline the current facilities available for young people, make suggestions for new facilities, and explain how your suggestions might affect people of other ages in your town.

'Why?' 'Because it's there!'*I can understand a text about ballooning.Revision: Student's Book page 59

- 1 Complete the sentences with an intensifying adverb formed from one of the two words in brackets.
- 1 Reading the book, I was _____ struck by how lethal high-altitude ballooning can be. (compel / force)
 - 2 The Eiger is so difficult to climb because of its _____ steep rock faces. (tantalise / ferocious)
 - 3 We were _____ close to the summit when we had to turn back. (tantalise / force)
- 2 Read the text quickly, ignoring the gaps. What is its main purpose?
- A To give an introduction to the history of ballooning.
 - B To review a recent book.
 - C To explain the events of a ballooning accident.

Reading Strategy

In gapped text tasks, you sometimes have to choose carefully between two paragraphs and decide which is the most logical to fill the particular gap. Look for words and phrases which indicate the logical development of the text, e.g. adverbs of time and reason, words that express contrast, pronouns that point forwards or backwards to nouns, paraphrasing of vocabulary, repetition of names or ideas and the use of verb tenses.

- 3 Read the Reading Strategy. Then read the text and match the missing paragraphs A–E with the gaps 1–4. There is one extra paragraph which you do not need.
- A As the balloon lost air, it descended. Glaisher came round, and calmly started taking readings again. After landing in a field, the two men walked seven miles to the nearest pub – no doubt still feeling the effects of acute hypoxia.
 - B They were alarmingly unprepared for the journey, and took off wearing light tweed jackets. Ascending quickly, they took readings and made entries in a log book.
 - C It turns out that the history of early ballooning is one of daring, ingenuity and often breathtaking stupidity. As I read the book, I was forcibly struck by how fairly ordinary people had taken extraordinary risks – in the name of science, exploration or plain one-upmanship.
 - D The history of scientific exploration is full of unlikely heroes, and also of rogues who wish to profit from the work and reputations of others. Sometimes, the people who achieved the most received scant recognition.
 - E By now, they were shivering uncontrollably and gasping for air. Frostbite was setting in on their exposed hands and faces. The men could no longer see well enough to read their instruments. Then Glaisher blacked out.

Falling Upwards

In the weeks before my one-and-only balloon flight in 2017, a friend gave me Richard Holmes's seminal work about the history of ballooning, Falling Upwards: How we Took to the Air. Holmes's beautifully written account takes readers from the early balloon flights of the 1780s to the first successful round-the-world attempt in 1999.

1 _____

The book contains a wealth of such extraordinary tales, but my personal favourite is that of scientists Coxwell and Glaisher's near-fatal flight in 1862. The two men proposed to take measurements of temperature, pressure and humidity at different altitudes. They took off on 5 September, intending to reach the upper atmosphere. Even Coxwell – an experienced balloonist – was completely ignorant about the dangers they faced.

2 _____

After nineteen minutes aloft, the pair had reached an altitude of two miles, and the temperature was dropping fast. At four miles, hypoxia – a lack of oxygen in the blood – was taking its toll. They could hardly function well enough to write in their log. But amazingly, they kept going to their planned altitude of five and a half miles.

3 _____

Holmes's breathtaking account of what happens next reveals the desperate courage of a man facing death. With Glaisher unconscious, Coxwell perilously climbed out of the basket and up the rigging even though he was about to black out. Unable to use his hands, he pulled himself up by the elbows, opening the gas valve with his teeth.

4 _____

Like many people in Holmes's inspiring book, Coxwell and Glaisher illustrate the naivety of early aerial pioneers. These men may have stepped out into the unknown blissfully unaware of the risks, but having read the book, I was acutely aware of them when I finally stepped into a basket. I was also comically overdressed!

Photo comparison

I can describe, compare and speculate about photos.

Speaking Strategy

You should accustom yourself to:

- speaking for a minute on a subject without interruption
- using fillers (Well, ...) and paraphrasing (It's kind of ...) to help you keep pauses to a minimum.
- listening to other students speak for a minute and then commenting or asking questions based on what you have heard.

1 Read the Speaking Strategy. Then complete the table with the phrases below.

Actually, ... er / um ... How do you say? I suppose if you see what I mean it looks a bit like a ... it's similar to a ... Let's see those things that you ... What else? ... What I mean is ... you know You use it to ...

- 5 I _____ he runs into problems like this all the time.
- 6 ... I _____ if he gets very frustrated sometimes.
- 7 ... my _____ would be somewhere in Britain.

5 Look at the task and photos C and D and make notes.

Compare the photos and say what challenges you think these people face in their jobs. What personal qualities might they have?

6 Do the exam task using your notes from exercise 5.

For and against essay

I can write a for and against essay.

Writing Strategy

Make sure your essay has a clear, logical structure.

Paragraph 1: Introduction. Rephrase the question and/or give an example of the situation it describes to show that you have understood it.

Paragraph 2: Give two or three pros (arguments for). Include evidence and/or examples where appropriate.

Paragraph 3: Give two or three cons (arguments against). Include evidence and/or examples where appropriate.

Paragraph 4: Conclusion. Sum up the most important or convincing arguments and give your opinion.

1 Read the Writing Strategy. Then read the task and essay.

- How many pros and cons are mentioned?
- Which arguments are backed up by examples or evidence?

Some people think that one year's military service should be compulsory for everyone when they leave full-time education. What are the advantages and disadvantages of military service?

Many people believe that young men – and possibly women – should complete a year of military service after leaving school. There are some advantages to this, but also many drawbacks.

To begin with, it is sometimes argued that military service helps to build character by teaching people the military ethos of protecting others and working together for the greater good. By the same token, people often learn skills that they use in later life. For example, many people first get their driver's licence – or learn to cook and clean – in the military. Last but not least, some nations need manpower to defend themselves against hostile neighbours. Scrapping military service would jeopardise their security.

By contrast, many people maintain that military service prevents millions of young people from getting on with their lives. The reasoning is as follows: understandably, some people stay in higher education for years to avoid doing military service. Similarly, many employers are reluctant to give people permanent jobs until they've done their military service. In other words, military service has a much bigger impact on a person's life than the year they actually spend in uniform. Another compelling argument against military service is the obvious fact that people can be sent to war. There is a strong argument for saying that people who go to war should be career soldiers, who have accepted the risk.

To sum up, compulsory military service has some benefits for both countries and individuals. But overall, I feel that these benefits are outweighed by the serious impact on young people's lives.

2 Match the underlined words in the text with the words and phrases below.

In conclusion in the same way likewise on the other hand people sometimes think that to put it another way

3 Complete the sentences with the words below.

case compelling least maintain place reasoning

- Some people _____ that having nuclear weapons is a good thing, but I disagree.
- The _____ for my argument against military service is as follows.
- Why don't I want to go out? Well, in the first _____, it's pouring with rain.
- Jess is a great colleague, a brilliant scientist, and last but not _____ – a true friend.
- The fact that you could die is, in my view, a _____ reason not to join the army.
- There's a strong _____ for compulsory military service in countries that share borders with hostile nations.

4 Read the task and make notes under the headings below. Think about pros and cons for the community as well as for people doing community service.

Some people argue that everyone should do a year of community service at some point in their lives. Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of compulsory community service.

1 Advantages of compulsory community service

2 Disadvantages of compulsory community service

2 Skim the text quickly. Which of the four experts are pro-Brexit?

Four experts give their opinions on the pros and cons for the UK of leaving the EU.

A CHRIS HOLMES

In my view, Brexit will have a devastating effect on the UK economy. Granted, membership of the EU wasn't cheap, but access to the single market, which exempts member states from paying tariffs on imports and exports within the EU, more than made up for the expense. Now, a whole new set of agreements will have to be drawn up. A free-trade deal with Europe is unlikely, as the EU will want to deter other member states from breaking away. Having left the union, the UK will also have lost much of its bargaining power to establish agreements with other world powers.

B SYLVIA CHALMERS

Weighing up the pros and cons, I am inclined to come down on the side of Brexit. In my opinion, concerns about trade agreements are unfounded because of the large deficit the UK has with the EU. The fact that the UK imports more than it exports means that it is in Europe's interest to maintain tariff-free trading if the UK leaves the single market. A more pressing issue for me is border security and the question of who and what should be allowed to enter the country. Leaving the EU will allow the UK to regain control of its borders and determine who and what can and can't come in.

C GEORGE PHILLIPS

As far as I can see, the UK will be much better off without the EU. Not only did it cost a fortune to be a part of Europe – some estimates put the figure at around £200 billion – but being a member state also had other drawbacks. For over four decades, the UK had to go along with wasteful and expensive EU regulations, such as those of the Common Agricultural Policy. I believe Brexit will bring some clear-cut advantages to the UK, such as favourable trade agreements with influential countries like China, India and the US and renewed control over fishing rights around its coast.

D AMANDA SHAW

The most disastrous effect of Brexit for me is the threat it poses to freedom of movement. Until now, EU residents have been able to live and work freely anywhere else in the bloc, not only increasing their job opportunities but also broadening their horizons. While security at customs is obviously an issue to be taken seriously, immigration to the UK appears to have created a more diverse national culture and a better-qualified workforce. Since Brexit, however, both the EU citizens currently working in the UK and the Brits settled in other EU member states are fearful about their future.

Reading Strategy

In this task you have to read four texts to identify similar or different opinions and attitudes. Take each question in turn and follow the procedure below:

- 1 Underline the key words in the question.
- 2 Note whether you need to find a similar or a different opinion.
- 3 Find and underline the opinion in the text specified in the question. If no text is specified, read all the texts.
- 4 Find and underline the same opinion in the other three texts.
- 5 Compare the opinions and choose the correct answer.

3 Read the Reading Strategy. Follow the instructions in the Strategy to match the experts A–D with questions 1–4. The experts may be chosen more than once.

Which expert ...

- 1 disagrees with George Phillips about the value for money of being in the EU? _____
- 2 has a different opinion from Chris Holmes about the nature of future trade deals with non-EU members? _____
- 3 shares the same view as Sylvia Chalmers about the importance of rigorous checks at ports and airports? _____
- 4 disagrees with Chalmers about the possibility of a beneficial trade agreement between the UK and the EU? _____

I can use a range of discourse markers to give my opinion in a debate.

'All of our dreams can come true if we have the courage to pursue them.'

Walt Disney

1 Read the quote. Do you agree or disagree with the statement?

Speaking Strategy

In a debate, you have some time to plan your answer. Decide if you are for or against the statement and think of four or five arguments to support your view. Start with one of your weaker arguments and move onto the stronger ones as the conversation progresses.

2 2.09 Read the Speaking Strategy. Then listen to a student giving his view about the quote in exercise 1. Does he agree or disagree with the statement? Complete his arguments.

- 1 _____

5 2.09 Listen again and circle the phrases you hear.

6 Read the speech disagreeing with the quote in exercise 1. Complete the speech with a suitable discourse marker. More than one answer may be possible.

1 _____, I'd like to say that I don't agree with the statement. 2 _____, it helps to have courage when pursuing your dreams, but other qualities are also necessary. 3 _____, I believe it is hard work that can make your dreams come true. If you work hard at school, you will be successful. 4 _____, the doors to many careers will be open to you. 5 _____, you will have to keep up the hard work. 6 _____ the dream itself, this must be realistic, 7 _____, it must be achievable. 8 _____, you must have a clear idea of the path you need to follow in order to achieve it.

7 Read the quote. Decide if you agree or disagree with the statement. Make notes on four or five points to support your argument.

'Keep true to the dreams of the youth.' (Friedrich Schiller, German playwright)

8 Now do the task using your notes from exercise 7.

An informal email

I can show empathy in an informal email.

You have received an email from an English friend.

As for starting work next month, I'm dreading it! I'm terrified I won't fit in. What about you – how are you feeling about your new job? Are you doing anything special to prepare for the first day – if so, what?

Write your email in reply.

- 1 Read the task and the email. Underline the two questions in the task and the answers in the email.

To: chris@email.com

Hi Chris,

Thanks for your email – it was great to hear from you! So good to hear you passed all your exams – congratulations on doing so well!

I know what you ¹ _____ about dreading starting work. If it ² _____, I feel exactly the same way. I keep on waking up in the middle of the night and wondering how I'll get through the first day. If it's any ³ _____, you aren't the only one who'll be getting up at the crack of dawn to trek across town! I still haven't decided yet whether to drive or go on public transport. At least if I get the train, I won't have to sit in a traffic jam for hours.

I see where you're ⁴ _____ from with the preparations – there's an awful lot to think about! I don't ⁵ _____ about you, but I've spent a fortune on clothes, because I really want to look the part. I've bought a new suit, a couple of shirts, a tie and some smart shoes. Apart from that, I've been thinking of questions I can ask my new colleagues when I meet them. I'm desperate to make a good impression and I really don't want to put my foot in it if I can avoid it.

Well, Chris, it's time for me to go. Enjoy your last week of freedom and try to stay cool. I'm sure ⁶ _____ will turn out all right in the end.

Let me know how it goes on Monday.

Best wishes,

Mike

- 1 manage to complete _____
- 2 very early in the morning _____
- 3 too much _____
- 4 have the right appearance _____
- 5 say or do the wrong thing _____
- 6 remain calm _____

Writing Strategy

- Emails follow the same rules as letters: an opening greeting, clear paragraphing and a closing phrase.
- The style depends on the target reader. In the case of a friend, the style should be informal, but the language should be as sophisticated as in a letter. Use contractions instead of full forms, and a wide range of:
 - 1 phrasal verbs: put up with (tolerate)
 - 2 idioms: have stars in your eyes (dream of being famous)
 - 3 set phrases Break a leg! (Good luck with your acting!)

- 4 Complete the informal expressions.

- 1 Let's cross that _____ when we come to it.
- 2 Get _____ to me as soon as you can.
- 3 I guess it's time to call it a _____.
- 4 We're all in the same _____.
- 5 Give it your best _____ and see what happens.
- 6 I'm scared that I won't make the _____.
- 7 She's always a _____ wreck before exams.
- 8 I'm going to _____ at it until I can do it.

- 5 Read the task. Make notes about how you could answer the two questions.

You have received an email from an English friend.

As for going travelling next month, I'm quite looking forward to it, but I'm afraid I'll get very lonely. How are you feeling about your trip? Are you doing anything special to prepare for the journey – if so, what?

Write your email in reply.

- 6 Write your email (220–260 words), using your notes from exercise 5.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Have you ...

- used four paragraphs?
- used the appropriate informal style?
- included phrases for giving advice and showing empathy?
- checked the spelling and grammar?

I have a book with photos of some of the world's most amazing places, very few of ⁴ _____ I've seen. But last year, on my 50th birthday, I did something crazy – I asked a friend to open the book and pick any place at random, promising I would go there. She picked the Rainbow Mountains of Zhangye Danxia, ⁵ _____ in remote north-western China!

I ⁶ _____ asked her to pick somewhere closer to home, but something told me that visiting that place would change me. So, two months later, I found myself on a wind-blown hilltop, staring at those beautiful, surreal mountains. Next to me was a local guide ⁷ _____ seemed more interested in his tea than the staggering view. He ⁸ _____ seen these mountains every day of his life, but I was gobsmacked. There and then I made a decision to make up for lost time and see more of the world.

Reading

Strategy

In the multiple-choice task you should first read the whole text to get an overall impression of it. Then you should read each question and underline the part of the text that refers to that question. You should then look at the options and decide which one answers the question.

- 1 Read the Strategy and the text in exercise 2. Which part of the text refers to question 1? Which option best answers the question?
- 2 Read the text and choose the correct answers (A, B, C or D).

New device to clear landmines

Every year between 15,000 and 20,000 people are killed by landmines, and many more are injured. The UN has identified 78 countries where around 110 million of these highly dangerous explosives still lie hidden in the ground, one of the worst affected being Afghanistan. Little wonder, then, that the inventors of the latest device intended to rid the world of this curse are two Afghan brothers.

It was in the mid-1990s that Massoud and Mahmud Hassani were smuggled out of the war-torn country by their anxious mother. After trekking through Pakistan and Uzbekistan, they eventually reached Europe, and ultimately the Netherlands, where they settled and were granted Dutch citizenship. Here the brothers resumed their education before going on to gain university degrees and founding their own company, Hassani Design BV.

The brothers' original design for an anti-mine device was based on a toy they used to make as children. They would hunt in the rubbish for the right materials to make a ball that would roll along the ground in the wind. Once the toy was ready, they would race it against others made by their friends to see whose travelled fastest. The game was frequently interrupted because if the toys left the path, the children could not go after them for fear of stepping on a landmine.

The Mine Kafon (kafon is short for kafondon, 'something that explodes' in the brothers' native Dari language) is a giant version of this toy. With over a hundred bamboo sticks as 'legs', and circular 'feet' made out of biodegradable plastic, the ball rolls along in the wind and detonates any landmines it falls on. The device can detonate up to four mines before too many lost 'legs' renders it ineffective. Relying on wind power, however, means that the user has no control over the instrument's path, so it is never certain that an area has been completely cleared of mines.

The brothers' latest device looks far more promising, however. The Mine Kafon Drone is a flying machine containing a computer, on-board GPS, and a robotic arm. The system works in three stages: mapping, detecting and destroying mines. First, it maps the terrain using a 3D camera. Then, it sweeps the mapped area with a metal detector, hovering around 4 cm above the ground and pinpointing any mines with the GPS coordinates. Finally, it places a small explosive on each mine and then triggers the charge remotely from a safe distance.

So far, several prototypes of the machine have been tested successfully, and the drone has met with the approval of the Dutch military, who have promised to help with further testing. The key phase will be to carry out tests in the field in Afghanistan. Having witnessed the effect of landmines first-hand as children, Massoud and Mahmud Hassani are keen to return to their homeland with a viable solution to the problem.

- 1 The writer thinks the nationality of the inventors of the latest anti-mine device is
 - A appropriate.
 - B bizarre.
 - C irrelevant.
 - D surprising.
- 2 The hardest part of the brothers' journey to Europe was
 - A avoiding areas of conflict.
 - B crossing inhospitable countryside.
 - C dodging opportunistic criminals.
 - D leaving close family behind.
- 3 The writer describes a child's toy in the third paragraph to
 - A give an example of a typical Afghan game.
 - B indicate how dangerous life is in Afghanistan.
 - C show what a happy childhood the brothers had.
 - D explain the origin of the brothers' inspiration.
- 4 Why wasn't the original Mine Kafon entirely successful?
 - A It was blown up too many times.
 - B Its design is too intricate for mass production.
 - C Its route cannot be determined accurately.
 - D The raw materials are difficult to source.
- 5 The Mine Kafon Drone flies over each area three times to
 - A carry out each of its different functions.
 - B get an accurate picture of the land.
 - C ensure that no mines are left undetected.
 - D check the GPS coordinates on the computer.
- 6 With respect to their future visit to Afghanistan, the Hassani brothers are
 - A concerned they may not be able to afford it.
 - B hopeful of being able to help their countrymen.
 - C fearful that their invention may not work.
 - D eager to see their childhood friends once more.

Listening

Strategy

In the multiple-matching task, you should listen for gist meaning rather than detail. You may not understand every word, but you should be able to identify one of the following for each of the tasks: speaker's main point; speaker's feeling; speaker's attitude; speaker's opinion.

3 Read the Listening Strategy and the two tasks in exercise 4. Which of the gist meanings in the Strategy do you have to identify in 1 task one? _____ 2 task two? _____

4 2.10 You will hear five short extracts in which people are talking about a day they had really been looking forward to.

For speakers 1–5, choose an activity from the list A–H that each person was looking forward to.

Speaker 1	_____	A a ceremony
Speaker 2	_____	B a concert
Speaker 3	_____	C a course
Speaker 4	_____	D a game
Speaker 5	_____	E a museum
		F a play
		G a movie
		H a trip

Now, choose from the list A–H for how each speaker felt at the end of the day.

Speaker 1	_____	A agitated
Speaker 2	_____	B disappointed
Speaker 3	_____	C emotional
Speaker 4	_____	D frustrated
Speaker 5	_____	E keen to repeat the experience
		F relieved
		G resentful of others
		H thrilled by experience

Use of English

Strategy

In the word-formation task, identify which part of speech is required to complete the gap and use your knowledge of suffixes to form the new noun, verb, adjective or adverb. In some cases, the new word may need a prefix as well. Look out for spelling changes when you add a suffix.

5 Read the Strategy and the text. Which part of speech is required to complete each gap? Then complete the text with the correct form of the word in brackets.

Back to nature

If your idea of a dream holiday is relaxing in a ¹_____ (luxury) villa in the Caribbean, you might be surprised by a new trend that is emerging in the UK. The ²_____ (popular) of remote wooden cabins in the country has increased dramatically in recent times in ³_____ (respond) to a demand from city dwellers for a place to get away from their highly ⁴_____ (stress) lives. Of course, the concept of a country retreat is not new. For centuries, families in countries in North America, Scandinavia and Eastern Europe have ⁵_____

(tradition) had a log cabin to escape to. But a lack of ⁶_____ (afford) land has prevented this practice becoming commonplace in the UK. For a small cabin to be attractive, the key is to ⁷_____ (maximum) space by having multi-purpose furniture and a small extra floor for the sleeping area. Not only is a cabin holiday more ecological than a trip to the Caribbean, but it is also less costly, permitting families to ⁸_____ (long) their stay by a week or so, due to not having to pay for international flights.

Speaking

Strategy

In Part 2, use a variety of words and phrases for comparing and contrasting the various aspects of the photos to demonstrate your range of language.

Writing

Strategy

The same conventions apply to an email as to a letter, such as an opening salutation, clear paragraphing and closing phrasing.

7 Read the Strategy and task. Write a paragraph plan, an appropriate salutation, final sentence and closing salutation.

You have received an email from an English friend.

As for my news, I've started working on Saturdays in my local supermarket. Actually, I'm not enjoying it very much, as one of my colleagues is always putting me down. It makes me feel really uncomfortable. Have you ever had a problem with someone you had to work with? If so, what did you do about it?

8 Write the informal email (220–260 words) for the task in exercise 7.

Listening Strategy

To help you understand unknown words, ask yourself:

- 1 Is the general meaning of the word clear? For example: 'That's typical!' he retorted. ('Retorted' is a speech verb.)
He wore a red cravat. ('Cravat' is an item of clothing.)
- 2 Is the word part of a pair or list of more familiar words?
His clothes were old, dirty and dishevelled. ('Dishevelled' must be related in meaning to 'old' and 'dirty'.)
- 3 Is the word followed by a result or explanation?
I felt so befuddled that I wasn't even sure why I was there. ('Befuddled' must broadly mean 'confused'.)

2 2.12 Read the Listening Strategy. Then listen to eight short extracts. Which word is missing from each extract? Circle the best word.

- 1 challenging repetitive terrifying
- 2 cramped damp noisy
- 3 fashionable faulty over-priced
- 4 cake coffee newspaper
- 5 dark comfortable plastic
- 6 expensive relaxing sunny
- 7 awful pleasant surprising
- 8 animals birds insects

3 2.12 Listen again. Which point from the Listening Strategy (1–3) helped you to work out each missing word?

- 1 _____ 3 _____ 5 _____ 7 _____
 2 _____ 4 _____ 6 _____ 8 _____

4 2.13 Listen to five people talking about leaving the UK. In which country has each speaker decided to live?

- Speaker 1 _____ Speaker 4 _____
 Speaker 2 _____ Speaker 5 _____
 Speaker 3 _____

5 2.13 Listen again. For questions 1 and 2, choose from the list (A–H). There are three extra sentences. Write your answers in the charts.

- 1 What was each speaker's main reason for going to live in another country?
- A because the climate is healthier
 - B to learn about another country's traditions
 - C to pursue a course of studies

Time traveller

I can understand a text about whether time travel is possible or not.

Revision: Student's Book page 80

Reading Strategy

When a text is organised into paragraphs, the first one or two sentences of each paragraph often indicate what information it will contain. Use these paragraph openers to get a general understanding of what the text is about and to help you find your way around longer texts.

1 Read the Reading Strategy. Then read the first sentence or two of each paragraph (1–5). Which paragraph(s) is / are about:

- a scientific theories of time travel? _____
- b an event organised by a well-known scientist? _____
- c an event organised by some students? _____

2 Read the text. Choose the best answer (a–d).

- 1 What was unusual about the way the party in 2009 was organised?
 - a Its location was given as co-ordinates rather than as a normal address.
 - b The invitations were sent out after the party had finished.
 - c The organiser did not want any guests to arrive.
 - d Refreshments were only provided after the guests had left.
- 2 The party convinced Hawking that travelling back in time:
 - a will never be mastered by humans.
 - b is not yet possible but will be one day.
 - c is a scientific fact.
 - d probably exists but cannot be proved.
- 3 The event at MIT was different from Hawking's party in that:
 - a far more invitations were issued.
 - b it was not openly publicised.
 - c the organisers did not expect anyone to attend.
 - d it was not only for people from the future.
- 4 Why did Mr Dorai suggest that time travellers should bring a solution to world poverty?
 - a To prove they are really from the future.
 - b Because poverty is a global problem.
 - c Because he hoped it would make him rich.
 - d To show people that the world is getting better.
- 5 The creation of 'wormholes' in space-time:
 - a is the only proven way to travel back in time.
 - b already allows travel into the future.
 - c is one possible way that time travel to the past might be achieved.
 - d is thought impossible by most scientists.

TIME TRAVELLERS WELCOME

1 On 28 June 2009, the famous British physicist Professor Stephen Hawking held a party for time travellers. For several hours, surrounded by decorations and refreshments, Professor Hawking waited for other guests to arrive. Nobody came. The invitation to the party clearly stated the time and venue, even giving the GPS co-ordinates for the location. Unusually, though, no invitations were sent out until after the party had taken place.

2 The point of hosting the party in such a strange way was to demonstrate that time travel is almost certainly impossible. If time travellers existed, the fact that invitations to the party were only issued after the party had taken place would not have been a problem: the time travellers could simply have gone back in time in order to attend. The fact that this did not happen is an indication, in Professor Hawking's view, that travelling back in time is impossible – not only today but at any time in the future.

3 In fact, the idea of inviting time travellers to a special event did not originate with Professor Hawking. In 2005, some graduate students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, led by 22-year-old Amal Dorai, organised a similar event. They called it a 'convention for time travellers' and produced invitations on special long-lasting paper, which they placed inside random books in the library.

4 Unlike Professor Hawking's party, this event was not solely for time travellers; guests from the present era were also invited. An online invitation asked guests from the future to bring something with them that would convince people that they were genuine time travellers. Mr Dorai suggested that a cure for cancer or a solution to global poverty would be particularly appreciated. But he denied that, if no time travellers arrived, it would prove that time travel is impossible.

5 Although most physicists are sceptical about the possibility of travelling back in time, some do not rule it out completely. Einstein's theories of space-time seem to allow for the possible creation of a special kind of tunnel called a 'wormhole', which some people believe could provide a route backwards in time. Of course, travelling forwards in time is much easier; we are doing that constantly! And if we travelled away from Earth on a super-fast spacecraft and then returned, we would find that far less time had passed for us than for the people who had stayed on Earth. People who had been younger than us before we left would now be years older. This kind of travel into the future fits completely with Einstein's theories of space and time. Travelling into the past seems to be a great deal more challenging, if not impossible.

Collaborative task

I can discuss and reach an agreement about holidays.

1 Match the two halves of these holiday activities. Then use one of them to label the photo.

- | | |
|-----------------|---------------------|
| 1 admire | a the slopes |
| 2 get away | b your feet up |
| 3 hit | c the local cuisine |
| 4 lounge | d the scenery |
| 5 put | e a film or show |
| 6 sample | f by the pool |
| 7 take | g from it all |
| 8 take in | h at water sports |
| 9 try your hand | i a dip in the sea |

He's _____.

2 Explain in your own words what activities you would expect to do on these types of holiday:

- 1 A Caribbean cruise: _____
- 2 A spa holiday: _____
- 3 A city break: _____

3 2.14 Listen to two students discussing plans for a holiday with friends after their exams. Tick (✓) the factors they mention. Which factor (a–f) do they agree is the most important?

- a the best type of accommodation _____
 - b the best location _____
 - c what activities are available _____
 - d travelling time to the destination _____
 - e overall cost of the holiday _____
 - f the likely weather at the destination _____
- They agree that factor _____ is the most important.

Speaking Strategy

In a discussion, you may need to help the conversation move forwards by eliciting your partner's opinions on particular points. Try to ask open questions rather than closed questions. An open question allows your partner to voice opinions; a closed question just requires a yes/no or other simple answer.

4 2.14 Read the Speaking Strategy. Then listen again and complete the questions the students ask.

- 1 Why _____ of a villa?
- 2 Would _____ stay in the mountains?
- 3 Would _____ the holiday needs to be cheap?
- 4 What's _____ camping?
- 5 What _____ hotels?
- 6 Don't _____ cost is a really important factor?

5 Which three questions from exercise 4 are closed rather than open?

Questions _____, _____ and _____ are closed.

6 Look at the task. Think about which factors would be most important and why. Make notes for each point.

7 Now do the task using your notes from exercise 6.

Letter of complaint

I can write a letter of complaint.

1 Match the words below with the definitions.

a mechanical fault a pile-up a puncture a security alert gridlock industrial action road works turbulence

- 1 _____: a road-traffic accident involving a large number of vehicles
- 2 _____: disruption caused by a suspected bomb
- 3 _____: a hole in a vehicle's tyre
- 4 _____: a refusal to work by a group of employees
- 5 _____: repairs to the road network
- 6 _____: atmospheric conditions which cause aircraft to shake
- 7 _____: traffic congestion that is so bad that vehicles are unable to move at all
- 8 _____: a technical problem with a vehicle

2 Read the task and the letter. Which two of the problems below did the writer face?

cancellations collision delays diversions lost luggage overcrowding

You recently experienced several problems with travel and accommodation while on an organised five-day hiking trip in the mountains. Write a letter of complaint to the holiday company explaining what went wrong and demanding action.

Writing Strategy

To make the language of a letter appropriately formal, we often use:

- should + subject + base form instead of if + subject + present simple in first conditional sentences:
Should you wish to complain, call this number.
- a possessive adjective instead of an object pronoun in verb patterns that include a gerund:
I understand your wanting to complain.
- a variety of higher-level vocabulary instead of simple verbs like go, try, do, etc.
We proceeded to the check-in area and attempted to find the correct desk.

3 Read the Writing Strategy. Then write examples from the essay of the three points above.

4 Which paragraph of the letter (1–4) refers to:

- a problems with accommodation? _____
- b reasons for writing the letter? _____
- c what should happen next? _____
- d travel problems? _____

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to complain about the inadequate service I received from your travel company during a recent five-day trip to the Alps. Although I cannot fault the staff who accompanied us during the hikes, the provisions made by the company for travel and accommodation were completely unsatisfactory.

Having endured an early-morning flight to Zurich, we were extremely disappointed to learn that we would have to wait four hours for our free transfer to the hotel, so that passengers from later flights could share the same coach. During this time, we endeavoured to arrange our own transfer. However, the cost of this proved to be exorbitant, so we were obliged to wait.

The hotel we were eventually taken to was not the one advertised on your website and was, we felt, vastly inferior in terms of comfort and facilities. The rooms we were allocated did not offer adequate space for two people to share. The restaurant was also too small for the number of guests wishing to have breakfast in the mornings. When we complained, we were told that the package we had booked did not guarantee our being assigned to any particular hotel.

I trust that you will investigate this complaint fully and offer an appropriate form of compensation in due course. Should you wish to receive any further details of the holiday, please contact me by telephone.

Yours faithfully,

Mrs S Burton

You recently returned from a one-week language course in Ireland and were unhappy with the accommodation and excursions on offer. Write a letter of complaint to the holiday company explaining what went wrong and demanding action.

5 Read the task. Then plan your letter using your answers to exercise 4 to help you.

6 Write your letter (220–260 words), using your plan from exercise 5.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Have you ...

- checked your spelling and grammar?
- used appropriately formal language?
- written 220–260 words?

- 7 refers to a scientific study? _____
- 8 mentions deliberately giving someone the wrong thing? _____

A Being a coffee-shop worker, or barista, is actually a harder job than it looks. It takes a while to learn the tricks of the trade. Did you know, for example, that when you order the biggest size in many coffee outlets, you don't get any extra coffee – only more hot water and milk. That marbled shape that baristas pour on top of your latte isn't just decoration either. If it has clear edges, it shows the barista that the milk was prepared correctly. Finally, it's worth being polite and waiting patiently for your morning shot if there's a queue. People who are rude and impatient may be given a decaf when they wanted caffeine – or vice versa – because you can't tell the difference.

B Supermarkets are usually cleverly designed, with the most expensive brands at eye-level, and the fruit and veg at the front – to give customers an impression of healthy, wholesome food when they enter. But the reality in some supermarkets is far from 'wholesome'. We forgive supermarkets for accidentally leaving the odd out-of-date product on the shelf, because it's clearly very difficult to keep track of thousands of different perishable goods. But did you know that some places indulge in 'food reconditioning'? This means that, for example, old pasta is ground up and repackaged as flour, and meat that has nearly expired is given a spicy marinade – then repackaged with a new 'use by' date. And unlike restaurants, supermarkets aren't immediately closed if they fail hygiene inspections. Amazingly, it's often up to the business themselves to clean up their act.

C If you think you're tired on a long-haul flight, spare a thought for your cabin crew. They've been on their feet for hours, and their body clocks are out of sync. When the cabin lights are dimmed at night, the crew actually like it when a passenger comes over and talks to them – it helps them to keep awake! Some passengers treat cabin crew as if they were glorified catering staff. In fact, they're highly trained people who may speak several languages and have skills ranging from building survival shelters to delivering a baby! Most passengers are well behaved, and the crew can usually spot trouble-makers when they first board. A bit of extra care usually pacifies these people. But it can be hard to preserve a smile when someone is going ballistic over their cold in-flight meal.

D Sure, hamburgers taste great – they're packed with salt, sugar and fat, which our brains are hard-wired to crave. But according to a 2013 report in a respected medical journal, only about 12% of that deliciously juicy-looking beef in your burger is really beef. The rest consists of fillers like soya protein, ground bone, and artificial flavourings. And those innocent-looking hamburger buns may well contain compounds like ammonium chloride – also used in explosives! Of course, there are plenty of good restaurants out there serving genuine home-made burgers made of real meat. But as customers, it pays to investigate for ourselves, and find the good places. It may come as a surprise to hear that many chefs never eat out!

Discussion

I can agree, disagree, give an opinion and justify it.

1 Complete a student's ideas with the words below.

add besides example not only opinion reason

I'm of the same ¹ _____ as Magdalena, who has made some really good points. ² _____ the arguments that we've just heard, I would ³ _____ this one. The main ⁴ _____ that I believe it is sometimes good to lie is that lies can be kinder than the truth. To give you just one ⁵ _____, would it help to tell a friend that you hate her new hairstyle? ⁶ _____ would this make her feel terrible, but also it would damage your friendship.

2 Complete the second sentence so it has a similar meaning to the first. Use 2–6 words, including the word in brackets.

- We'll never have the same opinion about this. (disagree)
We'll have to _____ about this.
- It may not always be true that lying is bad. (case)
It's _____ lying is bad.
- This is my main reason for having this opinion. (justification)
This is my _____ thinking this.
- You're completely right about that. (agree)
I _____ 100%.
- I totally support your point of view. (more)
I couldn't _____ you.
- I'd also say that nobody is 100% truthful. (add)
I would _____ nobody is 100% truthful.

Speaking Strategy

In a discussion, listen carefully to the other participant(s) and, while they are speaking, work out your own opinion on the point under discussion. When it is your turn to speak, be prepared to pick up on points they have made, and either agree with them and reinforce them, or disagree with them and give your own opinion.

3 Read the Speaking Strategy. Then look at questions 1–3 and make notes about how you would answer them.

- Is it ever acceptable to disobey the law?

- Some people think that people respect the law more as they grow older. Do you agree?

- Do you think it is ever right not to report someone who is breaking the law?

4 2.19 Listen to two people discussing the questions in exercise 3. Which of the questions do they ...

- agree about? _____
- disagree about? _____

5 2.19 Listen again and tick (✓) the discourse markers that you hear.

- | | |

| if anything <input type="checkbox"/> | even so <input type="checkbox"/> |
| as a matter of fact <input type="checkbox"/> | anyway <input type="checkbox"/> |
| besides <input type="checkbox"/> | incidentally <input type="checkbox"/> |
| to be honest <input type="checkbox"/> | by and large <input type="checkbox"/> |

6 Choose the correct discourse markers to complete the sentences.

- I love the band. As a matter of fact / Mind you, I've just downloaded one of their albums.
- Some people try to cheat in exams, but incidentally / by and large most students are honest.
- I trust my friends. To be honest / Even so, I don't tell them all my secrets.
- It was quite mean to play that practical joke on Matt. Mind you / If anything, it was very funny!
- I don't know why Jenny is mad at me. Mind you / If anything, she's the one who should apologise.
- It was wrong of you to do that. Incidentally / Even so, it's also against the law.

7 Read the statements below and think about whether you agree or disagree with them. Make notes giving reasons for your answers.

Society would collapse if people disobeyed laws just because they didn't like them.

I don't think there's anything wrong with buying photocopied books or pirate DVDs.

It's never right to report a friend to the police, whatever they've done.

Laws are only binding if they are made with the consent of all the people.

8 Choose two of the questions above and practise answering them. Speak for about 30 seconds.

Discursive essay*I can write a discursive essay using a variety of sources.*

- 1 Read the task. Think of two more reasons why it might be good or bad to limit freedom of speech.

Your class has had a discussion about freedom of speech, and you have made the notes below:

- 1 divisive or violent views
- 2 government political control
- 3 free speech as a human right
- 4 _____
- 5 _____

Some opinions expressed in the discussion:

'Sexist and racist views clearly need to be restricted.'

'Governments can use censorship to control people.'

'People need to be protected from abuse.'

Write an essay discussing TWO of the points in your notes. Explain which point is more important in your view, giving reasons to support your answer. You may make use of the opinions expressed in the discussion, but you should use your own words as far as possible.

- 2 Read the essay. Which points from the question and notes are not included?

Limiting freedom of speech is a controversial issue. Some people would argue that we should be able to say whatever we like, but others warn that people cannot be given unlimited freedom to express dangerous views.

In general, freedom of expression leads to a more tolerant society, where people value different opinions. However, it is argued that we have to impose some limits in order to protect people. This is due to the fact that some people have extreme and prejudiced views. These may give rise to violence. Consequently, we need to limit the freedom to express some opinions.

On the other hand, there are more controversial reasons why governments limit freedom of speech. All countries have state secrets such as the details of military operations. As a result, governments prosecute people who release sensitive information. But one of the main consequences of this is that governments can use national security as an excuse for hiding politically damaging information. Clearly it is totally undemocratic to limit people's freedom to discuss and criticise their government's activities.

To sum up, in general, freedom of expression is a good thing. However, I would argue that there have to be some limits to this freedom, due to the need to protect people and society from violent views.

- 3 Use the underlined phrases from the text to complete the sentences.

- 1 The rise in crime is partly _____ the economic crisis has increased unemployment.
- 2 One of _____ of state censorship is that people are unable to make informed decisions.
- 3 The town was flooded _____ of the heavy rain.
- 4 Similarities between two exam essays can _____ accusations of copying.
- 5 The company wasn't successful. _____, it closed down.

Writing Strategy

When writing an essay, make sure you:

- 1 read the task carefully and include all the relevant information.
- 2 write in an appropriate style for the genre.
- 3 organise the text in an appropriate way, presenting ideas coherently, and linking sentences and paragraphs.
- 4 use a range of grammatical structures and vocabulary, and use them correctly.

- 4 Read the Writing Strategy. Then read the task and plan your discursive essay. Make notes.

Your class has had a discussion about censoring art, music and literature, and you have made the notes below:

- 1 violent or shocking content
- 2 freedom of expression and creativity
- 3 offending some people

Some opinions expressed in the discussion:

'Many great works of art were offensive in their day.'

'People say that some lyrics encourage acts of violence.'

'Attacking religious figures or holy books should be off-limits because it offends a lot of people.'

Write an essay discussing TWO of the points in your notes. Explain which of the points is more important. You may make use of the opinions expressed in the discussion, but you should use your own words as far as possible.

- 5 Write your essay (220–260 words) using your plan from exercise 4.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Have you ...

- organised the essay into clear paragraphs?
- introduced your essay topic?
- supported statements with suitable examples?
- given your opinion?

Reading

Strategy

In the multiple-matching task, the wording of the questions is designed to lead you to specific information and to disregard irrelevant information. Underline the key words in the question to help you find the information in the text which provides the correct answers.

- 1 Read the Strategy above and question 1 in exercise 2. Follow the instructions in the Strategy to answer the question.
- 2 Read the article and questions 2–10. Match sections A–D with the questions.

Which hiding place...

- 1 failed to serve the function it was designed for? _____
- 2 was built to last well into the future? _____
- 3 is generally regarded as the best of its kind? _____
- 4 was missing from visual representations of the area? _____
- 5 must be reached by plane or ship? _____
- 6 has an uncertain future at present? _____
- 7 has a much greater potential than that which is currently being exploited? _____
- 8 was built paying meticulous attention to detail? _____
- 9 was procured with another function in mind? _____
- 10 is the site of unusual happenings which have not been explained? _____

The Perfect Hiding Place

Read about four of the world's most secret locations.

A The Mountain

Just a stone's throw from New York City lies a former iron-ore mine which has been converted into a heavily guarded storage facility known as The Mountain. Inside are the records of some of the largest and most influential companies in the USA. Purchased originally for growing mushrooms, the mine acquired its current function during the Cold War, when owner Herman Knaust realised its potential for protecting corporate information from nuclear attack and founded the company Iron Mountain Atomic Storage Inc. Apart from vital business records, The Mountain has housed art collections, valuable antiques and celebrity memorabilia in its 225 individually locked vaults, and today it is the premium storage location for the company now known as Iron Mountain Inc.

B Global Seed Vault

In the depths of an icy mountain on Norway's remote Svalbard archipelago exists a resource of vital importance: the Global Seed Vault. Far from the dangers of world crises and natural disasters, the building will eventually contain the seeds of all the plants the Earth has ever seen. Currently holding 930,000 samples from every corner of the planet, the deposit is at less than a third of its maximum capacity. Its principle aim is to serve as a back-up if one of the world's 1,750 individual seed banks is damaged. A case in point is the recent withdrawal of seeds from the Global Seed Vault to replace those lost during the transferral of an international agricultural research centre from Aleppo to Beirut as a result of the Syrian civil war.

C Burlington Bunker

Below a disused quarry near Corsham in the south-west of England stretches a vast underground community that remained a closely guarded secret for over thirty years. The huge complex forms what was once intended to be the Central Government War Headquarters, more commonly known as the Burlington Bunker. Fearing nuclear war with the Soviet Union, the British government ordered its construction in 1955 and made provision for everything that would be needed to survive for three months: offices and bedrooms, a bakery, a hospital, and even a BBC broadcasting studio to communicate with survivors. Although the facility was never used, it was maintained until 1991 before being finally decommissioned in 2004 and put up for sale.

D Area 51

Just over 160 km north of Las Vegas is an air base in the middle of the desert whose existence was not officially acknowledged until 2013. Known as Area 51, the facility is a top-secret US military installation which remained hidden for decades thanks to map-makers leaving it out and satellite imagery of the area being routinely deleted from government databases. It is understood that the base is the site at which the latest spy planes are developed and tested, giving rise to a number of reported sightings of UFOs over the years. These accounts have generally been attributed to the fact that witnesses were unaccustomed to seeing the lights of planes flying at such high altitudes as the ones being tested, but there are some who would strongly contest this justification.

Listening

Strategy

In the sentence-completion task, all of the words needed to fill the gaps will be familiar to you. Most questions will focus on concrete pieces of information, such as nouns or proper names, and the answers will generally be single words or very short noun groups, e.g. adjective + noun. Correct spelling is necessary for your answer to be awarded a mark.

- 3 Read the Strategy above and the text in exercise 4. What information do you need to fill the gaps in questions 1–8?
- 4  2.20 You will hear a talk about the latest research into animal migration. For questions 1–8, complete the sentences with a word or short phrase.

Remarkable journeys

Humpback whales are the ¹ _____ that have the longest migration.

The leatherback turtle studied by scientists started its journey in ² _____.

The blue wildebeest's migration is prompted by a search for ³ _____ to eat. The animal with the longest terrestrial migration is the caribou, or ⁴ _____. The insect with the longest migration route appears to be a ⁵ _____. The bar-headed goose flies south every year to avoid the ⁶ _____ in Mongolia. Scientists have never measured a ⁷ _____ flight longer than the bar-tailed godwit's. The arctic tern's migration is the longest because the birds visit the two ⁸ _____ each year.

- 5 a put off b stood out
c stood up d turned out
- 6 a fell out with b friended
c kept track of d ran into
- 7 a circumnavigated b conducted
c roamed d traversed
- 8 a accomplished b achieved
c attained d realised

Use of English

Strategy

In the multiple-choice cloze task, use your knowledge of collocations, dependent prepositions and verb patterns to eliminate the words that do not fit the gap. Then decide which of the remaining words fit the gap semantically.

- 5 Read the Strategy above. Then read the question and options below. Which is the correct option? Why are the other options wrong?

My grandparents are completely _____ to the idea of moving house. In short, they refuse.

- a against b disagreed c favourable d opposed

- 6 Complete the text. Write a, b, c or d.

Lone woman cyclist reaches Iran

When journalist Rebecca Lowe announced she was planning a twelve-month cycling trip to Iran, her friends and family tried hard to ¹ _____ her from going. They failed, of course, and on 29 July 2015 Rebecca set off alone from her London flat on what was to be a truly ² _____ journey. Her main aim in making this daunting trip was to ³ _____ a better understanding of the Middle East. She chose to cycle believing her bike would ⁴ _____ her to meet people more easily. And she was right. Being a lone woman cyclist, Rebecca ⁵ _____ from all other visitors and attracted the right sort of attention from locals. Nearly everyone she ⁶ _____ offered her food, shelter and, what she was really after, an insight into their lives. By the end of her journey, Rebecca had ⁷ _____ a grand total of 20 countries, including Turkey, Lebanon and Sudan. She ⁸ _____ her mission of reaching Iran on 20 June 2016, when she arrived in Azadi Square.

- 1 a disapprove b discourage

Speaking

Strategy

In the discussion phase of the test, if you disagree with a statement, you should do so politely, e.g. I'm afraid I don't agree, rather than That's wrong!

- 7 Read the Strategy. Add three more examples of phrases for disagreeing politely.

- 8 Politely disagree with the statements below using phrases from exercise 7 and a full personal response.

If you have a secret, it's best not to confide in your best friend.

Your employer should have access to all your personal information.

Writing

Strategy

Read the task carefully and choose the two points you feel you could write most about. Make notes about each of the points before you start writing, and think about how you can develop them. You can use the opinions in the task if you want to, but remember to paraphrase the actual words.

- 9 Read the Strategy above and the task below. Make notes about the two points you feel you could write most about.

Your class has had a discussion about how to improve road safety. You have made the notes below:

Measures for improving road safety:

- reduce speed limits
- increase punishments for dangerous driving
- introduce obligatory safety courses

Some opinions expressed in the discussion:

'Drivers shouldn't be allowed to go so fast on motorways.'

'Dangerous drivers should be banned for life.'

'Drivers should take a safety course every five years.'

Write an essay discussing TWO of the measures in your notes. You should explain which measure would improve road safety the most, giving reasons to support your answer.

- 10 Write the essay (220–260 words) for the task in exercise 9.

4 USE OF ENGLISH Complete the text. Write one word in each gap.

THE CORNISH REVIVAL

Kernewek, or Cornish, is one of the minority languages of the UK. Spoken only in Cornwall, a county in the south-western tip of England, the language was considered dead after the ¹ _____ person to speak it fluently passed away in 1777. In the early 20th century, however, a revival of the language began, but there were very few written records ² _____ go on. The ³ _____ attempt to provide standardised rules was made by Robert Morton Nance in his 1929 work Comish For All. From then on, the revival gathered steam ⁴ _____ to come to a standstill in the 1980s due to an argument over the ⁵ _____ important decision to be made: which of the three or four dialects should be declared official? At one point it seemed that the differences of opinion might be ⁶ _____ great for a compromise to be reached. In 2008, however, a standard written form was agreed upon. Since then, Cornish has gained ⁷ _____ speakers for UNESCO to remove its classification of the language as 'extinct'. Today, some Cornish people are ⁸ _____ bold as to dream of living in their own independent country.

3 Read the Reading Strategy. Match questions 1–6 with paragraphs A–C.

Which paragraph mentions a movie in which ...

- the story appears to be going nowhere? _____
- the suspense increases with every moment? _____
- one character is deceived by another? _____
- the audience doesn't witness a vital moment? _____
- the ending is narrated rather than represented visually? _____
- viewers find themselves in the middle of the action in the opening scene? _____

MOVIES THAT FAIL TO MOVE

For critic Allen Palmer, a great movie does not need a happy ending, but one where the final scenes are emotionally satisfying. Below are three movies she feels do not fit the bill.

A NO COUNTRY FOR OLD MEN

Despite the Coen brothers' four Academy Awards, I found the ending of this 2007 movie disappointing. The movie is a kind of cat-and-mouse tale, where Vietnam veteran Llewelyn Moss is the mouse, and hitman Anton Chigurh the cat. Finding a case containing two million pounds in a field in Texas, Moss flees with the money, and Chigurh is hired by its owners to recover it. Chigurh finishes off everyone standing between him and Moss, using his trademark coin flip to decide the victim's fate. The tension mounts as Chigurh nears his prey, but just when it appears that the two are set to clash, Moss is killed by someone else – off-screen. For me, the greatness of this movie lies in the journey, not the destination.

B THE HURT LOCKER

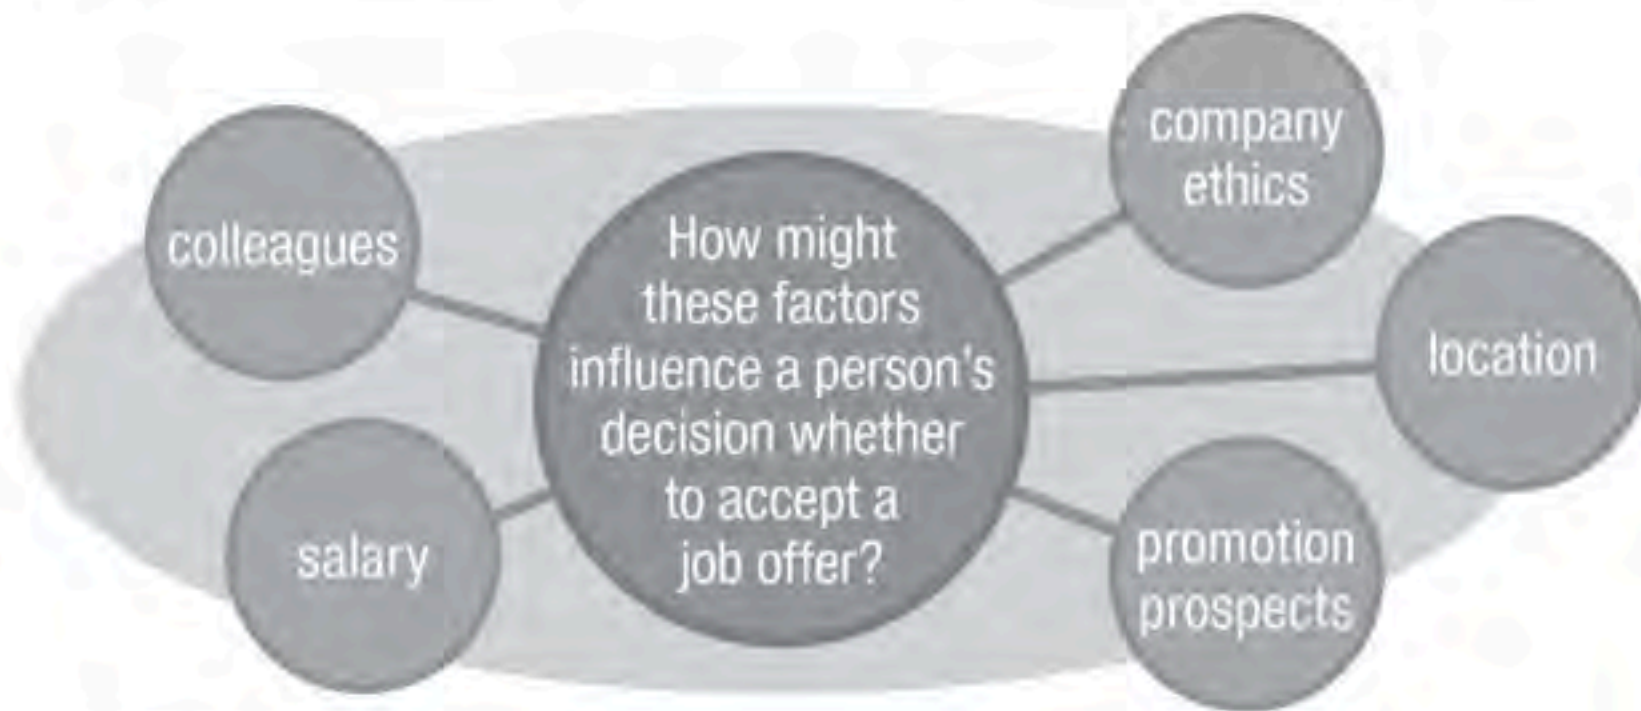

Kathryn Bigelow's 2008 movie is awesome – at least, for the first hour or so. When the lights go down, the audience is transported to the battle-scarred streets of Baghdad, where a bomb disposal squad is at work defusing an explosive device. At the start, the movie is a rollercoaster ride, with the tension rising and falling as the bombs are deactivated – or not. Later, however, it suddenly becomes clear that, although the bombs are getting bigger, the action is repeating itself. Towards the end, one soldier gets injured, another shows signs of mental stress and their leader goes home on leave until he can return to do the same all over again. What we seem to have here is the depiction of a conflict zone rather than the exploration of a plot line.

C UP IN THE AIR

Jason Reitman's 2009 satirical movie about corporate 'downsizer' Ryan Bingham is certainly a lot of fun at the start. Bingham – played by George Clooney – is employed by a Human Resources consultancy to travel the country firing people. Enter Alex, a beautiful executive in the same league as Bingham, and a new colleague, Natalie, whose innovative idea for remote firing via webcam threatens Bingham's very existence. The movie falls apart, however, when Bingham discovers that Alex isn't the woman he thought she was. From this point on, the audience is talked through the action rather than feeling it. We discover that Bingham gives Natalie a glowing reference to help her get a new job, but Alex gets no further mention. Bingham himself is last seen dropping his luggage in front of the destination board of an airport, which could mean anything, really.

Collaborative task

I can deal successfully with interruptions.

Which two factors are the most important when deciding whether or not to accept a job offer?

1 3.07 Read the task and listen to two students discussing it. Answer the questions.

- 1 Which factors do the students talk about?

- 2 Which of the two candidates tries to dominate the conversation? _____
- 3 How many times does the other candidate interrupt the dominating candidate? _____

Speaking Strategy

In a collaborative task, students are expected to share the interaction equally.

- 1 If the other student dominates the discussion, interrupt them politely to give your opinion.
- 2 If you are interrupted when you are speaking, you can choose to allow the interruption or to reject it politely.
- 3 If you reject the interruption, you need to go back to what you were saying.

4 3.08 Read the question and listen to students doing the second part of the task. Which two factors do they choose?

5 3.08 Listen again. Who says the synonyms for important below? Write G (girl) or B (boy). There are some extra synonyms that are not used.

- | | | |
|----------------|-------------------|-------------------|
| critical _____ | essential _____ | significant _____ |
| crucial _____ | fundamental _____ | vital _____ |
| decisive _____ | imperative _____ | |

2 Read the Speaking Strategy. Match phrases 1–14 with categories A, B, C and D below. Write the numbers.

- | |

 - 11 Please let me continue. _____
 - 12 As I was saying, I think ... _____
 - 13 Excuse me for butting in, but ... _____
 - 14 That's OK. What did you want to say? _____

3 3.07 Listen again and tick (✓) the phrases 1–14 in exercise 2 you hear.

6 Look at the task. Make notes about the importance of each option.

Which two factors are the least important when choosing a venue?

7 Read the question above. Make a note of your choices and reasons.

8 Now do the task using your notes from exercises 6 and 7.

You have just finished a preparation course for being a lifeguard at a swimming pool. In the mornings you had classes, and in the afternoons you practised what you had learned in a swimming pool. The course director has asked you to write a report in which you should evaluate the programme, explain which part of it was most useful and recommend changes for future courses.

1 Read the task above and the report. In the writer's opinion, which part of the course was the most useful?

Ivybridge Sports Lifeguard Course

Introduction

The aim of this report is to assess the effectiveness of the lifeguard course I recently participated in, identify the most valuable part of the course, and make some recommendations for improvements.

Evaluation

On the ¹ _____, I gained a great deal from the course. As well as learning different techniques for rescuing swimmers in difficulty, I acquired a thorough knowledge of health and safety legislation, and basic first-aid skills. The only ² _____ of the course was the price, which seems excessive considering most of the participants were students.

Theory vs practice

In ³ _____ of teaching, the morning classes definitely had the edge over the afternoon because the time was used more effectively. The morning classes were well planned and interesting, while the ones in the afternoon were much less well organised. This meant we spent much less time in the water, so we did not have the opportunity to practise as much as I would have liked. Therefore, I would say that I benefited more from the theory part of the course than the practical part.

Recommendations

As a result of my experience, I would like to suggest the following:

- The classes should be more structured to allow for better use of the time available.
- Participants ought to spend more time practising life-saving skills in the water.
- Students should be given a discount on the fees to make the course more accessible to them.

If these recommendations are carried out, the lifeguard course at Ivybridge Sports is bound to improve.

2 Read the report again and complete the phrases (1–3) for evaluating an experience / event and comparing and contrasting different aspects.

3 Match the two halves of the sentences.

- 1 Broadly speaking, the programme _____
- 2 In general, the course lived _____
- 3 The afternoon classes were superb, unlike _____
- 4 Weighing up the different factors, _____
 - a I would say I benefited more from the mornings.
 - b leaves a lot to be desired.
 - c the morning classes, which were appalling.
 - d up to my expectations.

Writing Strategy

In a report you describe and evaluate an experience, and make recommendations for the future. You must use a formal impersonal style, and follow a clear structure, with a title and subheadings.

- Paragraph 1 states the aim of the report by paraphrasing the three elements in the task.
- Paragraphs 2–4 each explore one of the elements in the order they appear in the task.

Read the task carefully to understand the context for the report and the three elements you need to explore.

4 Read the Writing Strategy and the task. Underline the three elements in the task.

You have just finished a preparation course for being a helper at a summer camp. In the mornings you had theory classes, and in the afternoons you practised what you had learned with some children. The course director has asked you to write a report in which you should evaluate the programme, explain which part of it was most useful and recommend changes for future courses.

5 Make notes about the three elements in the task.

- 1 _____
- 2 _____
- 3 _____

6 Write your report (220–260 words), using your notes from exercise 5.

CHECK YOUR WORK

Have you ...

- followed the structure in the Writing Strategy?
- included phrases for evaluating an experience / event and comparing and contrasting different aspects?
- checked the spelling and grammar?

4 Choose the correct words to complete the text.

The great Roman cities of North Africa ¹gave / enjoyed huge wealth in their time. Today they stand abandoned. At one time it was felt that climate change ²triggered / put the demise of Roman cities like Sabratha and Leptis Magna. Today, however, that theory has been ³given / undermined by scientific data.

Natural events such as earthquakes undoubtedly ⁴enjoyed / played a role in the destruction of some ancient North African cities, but we now believe that human actions are mostly to blame. Wars and invasions led to the destruction of irrigation systems. That was followed by widespread deforestation, which ⁵spelled / undermined the end for agriculture. Reading

Strategy

Once you have chosen a paragraph, remember to check that it fits the text after the gap as well as the text before. Remember to focus on the development of the text, and not on the repetition of words.

- 1 Read the Strategy above and the gapped text in exercise 2. Read the paragraphs before and after gap 1 and missing paragraph D. Does paragraph D fit the gap? Why?/Why not?

- 2 Read the text. Match paragraphs A–G with gaps 1–6. There is one extra paragraph you do not need.

How old is old?

As far as living organisms go, it would appear that trees are the ones that live the longest. But how do scientists determine the age of something that has been around for so much longer than they have?

1 _____

A more usual practice is to count the rings in a tree trunk, where one ring equals one year of growth. Tree-ring dating has several drawbacks, however: firstly, it only works for trees with an annual growth spurt, and secondly, it usually involves the tree being cut down.

2 _____

Those trees that have already been dated appear on the Old List, a register compiled by researchers in the USA. Notable entries are: a 2,222-year-old sacred fig tree in Sri Lanka; and a Patagonian Cypress tree in Chile, which is 3,627 years old. Extraordinary though these figures may seem, there are two trees that are even older than these.

3 _____

It is astonishing to think that both of these trees have witnessed the rise and fall of the Roman Empire. More amazing still is the fact that they were already established when the ancient Egyptians started building pyramids. But are they really the oldest single living things on the planet? That depends how you understand the word 'single'.

4 _____

Dating an organism of this kind is highly problematic, as the new plants grow in all directions and regenerate themselves as they go. Therefore, taking a section of one of the trunks will not tell you how old the whole tree is. Instead, scientists have used Pando's size to estimate its age, coming up with a figure somewhere 'between a few thousand and 80,000 years'.

5 _____

Scientists are almost certain that this is not the case for one simple reason: all known species can die, even species that appear not to age. However, certain factors do exist that appear to influence longevity, not only in the world of plants.

6 _____

For now, it seems, we will have to accept the Great Basin bristlecone pine as the oldest, precisely measured, organism on Earth, although Pando the quaking aspen and Antarctic glass sponges may well be older. Of course, there's also a chance that the oldest living organism has not yet been found.

- A The quaking aspen is a remarkable tree which can multiply in a kind of clone-like way by having new plants sprout from the root system of the parent plant. One such tree, nicknamed Pando, has produced a forest of an estimated 50,000 trees in Fishlake National Park in Utah, USA.
- B The least intrusive method is to consult records detailing which specimens are growing where, or look at maps showing significant ancient trees. Arboriculturalists also examine old paintings and artwork to see if their tree existed at a certain time.
- C Take the Antarctic glass sponge, for example. Its freezing cold habitat causes it to grow extremely slowly. Scientists think that this slow growth contributes directly to its advanced age. With an estimated life span of 15,000 years, the Antarctic glass sponge is almost certainly the oldest living animal on the planet, although there is no scientific evidence to prove this title.
- D A well-known method for measuring the age of a tree is dendrochronology, or tree-ring dating. This method has been used since the 1900s to establish how old a tree might be, and it is still the most common method used today.
- E One is Methuselah, a Great Basin bristlecone pine growing in the White Mountains of California. Methuselah is an incredible 4,850 years old. But the tree that tops the list is an unnamed bristlecone pine from the same location. Aged 5,067, this tree has existed for over five millennia.
- F The question is: if a tree can live to such a great age, are there any living organisms that are actually immortal?
- G Fortunately, today's scientists have an instrument they can use to avoid this. It is called an increment borer, and is a kind of drill that allows them to extract a section of the trunk without killing the tree.

 - Dissatisfaction with the selection process.
 - Objections from council members.
 - Opposition from the public.
 - The results of a vote.
- When Los Angeles held the Games, the city
 - benefited directly from the event.
 - exceeded the financial plan considerably.
 - got into substantial debt with lenders.
 - invested unwisely on new installations.
- According to Jeremy, there are very few visitors to the Olympic Park in Rio because
 - it is completely inaccessible.
 - it has been closed for a number of years.
 - it offers nothing for people to do.
 - it is way out of most people's price range.
- Jeremy implies that past Olympic Games
 - were not as well organised.
 - had a better atmosphere.
 - didn't have as many rules and regulations.
 - were much less commercialised.
- Regarding the future of the Games, Jeremy thinks
 - its days are numbered.
 - it won't exist much longer in its current form.
 - it will always be held in the same place.
 - it may need to change some of the events.
- In Jeremy's opinion
 - the Games should last for at least a month.
 - the medal winners should get more recognition.
 - the medal board should be shown more often.
 - the number of events should be limited.

Use of English

Strategy

If the key word appears to have no connection with the first sentence, it may well be part of an idiom. Think of idioms you know that contain the key word, and choose the one that matches the meaning of the first sentence.

- Read the Strategy and the sentence below. Which idioms do you know that contain the word TIME? Complete the second sentence with the correct 'time' idiom.

Kendra is always gossiping, so I don't really like her. TIME
I _____ Kendra because she's always gossiping.

- For questions 1–6, complete the second sentence so that it has a similar meaning to the first sentence. Use between three and six words including the word given. Do not change the word given. Use the strategy in exercise 5 to help you.

- Harry's great, but he forgets things very easily. SIEVE
I'm very fond of Harry, but he _____.
- Lucy doesn't agree with her cousin about politics. EYE
Lucy and her cousin don't _____ about politics.
- Hugh made a bad start on his first day at work. FOOT
Hugh _____ on his first day at work.
- I didn't enjoy that book you lent me. GET
I _____ that book you lent me.
- I promise I won't say a word. LIPS
My _____, I promise.
- She didn't start to speak until everyone was quiet. DIED
She waited until the noise _____ before she started to speak.

Speaking

Strategy

In the speaking test, you may not understand everything the examiner or the other candidate says. Use phrases to ask for repetition or clarification if necessary.

- Read the Strategy. Complete the phrases below.

- I didn't _____ catch that. Would you _____ saying it again?
- Sorry, could you _____ that again? I just want to make _____ I understood the question.

- Work in pairs. Do the task below. Use the ideas in the Strategy to ask for repetition if appropriate.

Which of these endings might be the most stressful?

- ending a relationship
- leaving school/university
- leaving home
- retiring from a job

Writing

Strategy

When you write a report, you can use the facts from the task, but you will also need to make use of your own ideas and experiences.

- Read the Strategy and the task below. Which of the facts from the task can you use and which of your own ideas and experiences?

You have just been on a school trip organised by your school. There have been a number of complaints about the trip. The head teacher has asked you to write a report in which you should evaluate the trip, outline the main problems and recommend changes for future trips.

- Write the report (220–260 words) for the task in exercise 8.

Listening

- 1  3.10 Listen to a radio interview and choose the best answers (a–d).

- What does Kauffman claim in his book?
 - It doesn't take as long as people think to become very good at something.
 - Twenty hours is enough time to learn any language fluently.
 - Everyone can quickly become reasonably competent at anything.
 - Learning any new skill takes no effort at all.
- What does the speaker say about the 10,000-hour figure?
 - It's very inaccurate, and not well researched.
 - It's only true for some people.
 - It discourages people from trying to learn new things.
 - It doesn't match her experience of learning.
- What is the first step in learning something new, according to Kauffman's book?
 - Breaking the skill down into smaller parts.
 - Discovering shortcuts to learning.
 - Learning how to memorise things fast.
 - Finding enough time to practise.
- What does the speaker say is a major barrier to learning?
 - A lack of natural ability.
 - Inability to memorise or recall new information.
 - A lack of time to practise.
 - An inflexible attitude to learning.
- What do Kaufmann and Gladwell both believe about learning?
 - The amount of time you spend learning something is totally unimportant.
 - There's no such thing as natural talent.
 - Talent isn't everything when it comes to learning.
 - People give up learning new skills too easily.

Speaking

- 2 Work in pairs. Take turns to ask and answer the questions.
- What subjects and skills do you enjoy and dislike learning? Why?
 - What do you find easy or difficult to remember? Why?
 - What skills do you have?
 - What new skills would you like to learn in the future? Why?
 - How do you like to spend your free time?
 - What do you think you will be doing in ten years' time?

- 3 Read the texts about vision and match them with questions 1–8. Each text can be matched with more than one question.

Which text ...

- mentions the brain creating something? _____
- talks about qualified people being influenced? _____
- mentions the link between language and perception? _____
- mentions our inability to remember things? _____
- discusses differences in colour perception? _____
- suggests a reason for something by mentioning the natural world? _____
- mentions seeing more when you pay attention? _____
- suggests competitions are not as fair as they seem? _____

A Do you see the same colour as me?

The Candoshi native people of Peru have one word for orange and yellow, when most people in Peru would use separate Spanish words for these two colours. More surprisingly, they have the same colour word (kavabana) for colours from purple to blue to green, but another word (kamachpa) for what most Peruvians would call 'dark green'. It's clear that different groups of people tend to divide up colours differently, but do they actually see them in a different way?

Tests with the Himba people of Namibia suggest that we do see colours differently. In one experiment, a slightly different tone of green in a circle of green dots really stood out for the Himba people. This is interesting, bearing in mind it was almost impossible for Europeans to see the difference. In contrast, the Himba found a test where they had to find a light blue spot amongst light green ones very difficult. This may be owing to the fact that the Himba word for these two colours is the same. It seems that people around the world really do see things differently.

B Seeing red

Whether or not a sports team will win their next match may partly depend on the colour of their shirts. Two British anthropologists at Durham University reached this startling conclusion by studying the results of boxing, wrestling and tae-kwondo matches from the 2004 Athens Olympics. Olympic officials randomly give blue or red clothes and equipment to competitors in these sports. However, the study found that in matches where the opponents were well matched in terms of skill, the competitor in red had won more often. It seems that colour was affecting the judgement of the referees. This is worrying, given that sports referees are highly qualified and must be impartial.

One explanation for this may be the role of red in nature, where the colour will usually indicate dominance and strength. Referees may tend to perceive players in red as being more capable – something that is crucial in sports where winning and losing often come down to points awarded by the judges. Interestingly, the study also suggested that competitors may feel more self-assured and confident when they are wearing red.

C What do we see?

Stop anyone in the street and ask them about the things they've just walked past, like the colour of a car or what was in a shop window. The chances are they won't be able to recall these things – even if you try to jog their memory with questions.

Some scientists think the reason for this is that it would simply take too long for our minds to process everything that our eyes have seen. But, they say, we've all seen city streets before so we've built mental models of things like buildings and cars. When we walk along the street, they claim that we tend to rely on these models and don't actually 'experience' many of the real things around us.

According to this theory, we only really 'see' things when we pay attention to them – like avoiding a pedestrian who is about to walk into us. Even then, we are unlikely to perceive details like the person's hair or clothes – unless they're particularly unusual. But our mind does a great job of filling in the details, and consequently our world seems rich and detailed. In effect, we may all be living inside our own virtual models of the world: our own personal Matrix.

SEEING IN SLOW MOTION

People ¹_____ report that time seems to slow down when we are in life-threatening situations. Objects seem to move in slow motion, and seconds seem to stretch as a person realises they are about to have an accident. So is ²_____ somehow able to work faster than normal during an emergency? This would give us more chance to make life-or-death decisions, but also slow down our perception of time.

In ³_____ of this common experience, neuroscientist David Eagleman conducted experiments where volunteers were asked to look at a fast-moving clock and try to read the numbers. They did this under normal conditions, and when they were in a ⁴_____ situation. (The latter involved dropping volunteers from a height of 70 feet attached to a bungee cord.) In both situations, the numbers moved too fast for the volunteers to read. Given this fact, Eagleman concluded that the brain wasn't working any faster than normal in stressful situations. But if that's not the reason for this commonly reported experience, then what ⁵_____?

One explanation might be that the ⁶_____ pays more attention to threats and dangers. This means that our brains process more information about them, so frightening events are associated with more detailed, vivid memories. When we remember the event later, we have more information to ⁷_____. This greater detail makes it feel like the event ⁸_____ in slow motion.

Listening

- 1  3.11 Listen to a speaker reviewing a book and complete the sentences with 1–2 words.

The Seven Basic Plots, by Christopher Booker

- Booker suggests that all stories are _____ on one of seven basic plots.
- The speaker found the idea intriguing because as a teacher, she's used to _____.
- In 'overcoming the monster' stories, the monster always appears _____ than the hero.
- Often the plot contains a last-minute _____, after all appears lost.
- The characters in 'rags to riches' stories don't _____ their poverty or bad circumstances.
- In 'rags to riches' stories, the hero's _____ leads to their success in the end.
- In 'voyage and return' stories, a character visits a place which is _____ from their ordinary world.
- Plots may be similar because ancient stories are _____ in different cultures and times.

Speaking

- 2 Work in pairs. Look at the photos and discuss the question.

What are the advantages and disadvantages of each of these presents? Which one would you prefer to receive?

Reading

- 3 Read the text opposite about a famous person and her book and complete it with paragraphs A–G below. There is one extra paragraph that you do not need to use.

A Her chance came a few years later, when the Leakeys proposed that she lead a study of mountain gorillas living in Rwanda. This was quite a leap of faith for the Leakeys, when you consider that Dian Fossey had no qualifications in zoology.

B Challenging as those problems were, the biggest danger was the poachers – hunters who killed the gorillas to sell their body parts as chilling souvenirs. Fossey fought off the poachers, and refused to give in to their threats to kill her if she didn't leave.

C If I hadn't read the book, I wouldn't know anything about this remarkable woman, who gave her life to study and protect mountain gorillas. The book is a wonderful portrait both of the woman herself and of the animals that she devoted much of her short life to.

D Gorillas in the Mist is a touching and thought-provoking account of Fossey's life with the gorillas. Not only does it beautifully portray the gorillas, but it also highlights the grave dangers that they face. The book became a best-seller, and it led to a worldwide conservation campaign.

E Ultimately, so much of conservation work comes down to the efforts of people like Dian Fossey. Brave individuals who devote their lives to protecting wildlife and sometimes pay the ultimate price.

F It did take the mountain gorillas time to accept her, but eventually she was living with four gorilla families – an accepted member of their group. Fossey studied the animals for many years – earning a PhD for her work.

G No sooner had Fossey arrived in Africa in 1963 than she fell in love with the continent. There she met famous scientists Joan and Louis Leakey, who would later change her destiny. She also made friends with two wildlife photographers who were making a documentary about mountain gorillas. It was they who first took her to see these amazing creatures.

Has technology made life better or worse for most people in the last 50 years? Why?

Reading

- 3 Read the text and choose the correct options (a–d).

- 1 What is true about the building in Chengdu mentioned by the author?
- a Like the Sydney Opera House, it's an entertainment complex.
 - b The building has a symbolic value for the city.
 - c It was designed to attract tourists.
 - d It proves that Chengdu is now a megacity.
- 2 What does the text NOT say about the Industrial Revolution?
- a It led to migration from rural areas.
 - b It didn't initially improve the lives of workers.
 - c It made city planners immediately improve urban areas.
 - d It led to the growth of new cities.
- 3 What does the writer say about city farms?
- a They are only possible in cities which have a lot of green space.
 - b They already exist, but not in very big cities.
 - c They will only be possible in cities with tall buildings.
 - d They will lead to food shortages.

In 2013, people in Chengdu, China, excitedly toured their city's latest attraction – a mammoth building twenty times bigger than the Sydney Opera House, with two 1,000-bed hotels, hundreds of shops, and an artificial beach complete with a Mediterranean village. Chengdu is one of the fastest-growing cities on the planet – just one of the many new megacities that are mushrooming worldwide. This showcase building was clearly intended to show the city's new wealth and power.

In 1800, only 3% of the world's population lived in urban areas. But in Europe, the Industrial Revolution was already underway, and new cities were growing up almost overnight. It was at this time that rural workers began migrating in large numbers in search of work and a better life in the cities. Most of those early migrants found little but poverty, overcrowding, pollution and disease. Urban life expectancy plummeted after the Industrial Revolution, until drastic improvements in city planning helped to put an end to some of the worst problems. By 1950, Tokyo had become the world's first 'megacity' – a city with a population of more than ten million. Today eleven cities are home to more than twice that number of people – and in the near future we will be seeing more.

Cumulative Review 3 (Units I–5)

- 4 The writer thinks that the growth of megacities ...
- is definitely a good thing.
 - will mean that governments can't cope.
 - may well be unstoppable.
 - will be bad for mankind.
- 5 What message does the last paragraph contain?
- The difference between a better or worse future depends a lot on what we do.
 - We need to halt the growth of megacities immediately.
 - We must invest more money in new technologies.
 - Wealthy countries will continue to act unfairly towards developing nations.

The streets of growing cities are often built on old farm land, so food for the city's sky-rocketing population has to come from further and further away. One solution may be to build farms inside the city – in small empty spaces between buildings, or even on rooftops. There are already such city farms in small cities like Havana and Vancouver, but the big challenge is to scale these up for megacities, where space is in even shorter supply. For this reason, some people envisage huge vertical farms in skyscrapers, where food can be grown on each floor.

Megacities like São Paulo and Los Angeles – where hundreds of new cars go onto the streets every week – are regularly paralysed by traffic congestion. Clearly, transport systems will need to be totally redesigned to cope with escalating urban populations. To this end, China will soon have developed an electric bus which can carry up to 1,000 people! And this megabus won't be taking up any space on the road – it's designed to be like a bridge on wheels, travelling over other traffic.

The growth of megacities is probably inevitable, but will it be a good or a bad thing? Optimists point to cities like Shanghai and Chengdu, which have transformed themselves and radically improved life for their populations. However, others point to megacities like Mumbai and Jakarta, where population growth far outpaces the ability of local governments to provide enough infrastructure. At the end of the day, wealthy governments need to do their bit to help improve the infrastructure of cities in developing nations. If they do this, megacities will become magnets of technology, education and culture, creating new opportunities for mankind. If they don't, untold millions will be forced to live in poverty-stricken, crime-ridden cities, competing desperately for dwindling resources.

 - What can't the miner who died have known?

 - Why is the human body unable to cope with the high heat and humidity in the caves?

 - How did Paolo Forti's team overcome this problem?

 - What work did the explorers do inside the caves?

 - What does the writer think will happen in the future?

THE CAVE OF

CRYSTALS

The Naica mine, near Chihuahua, Mexico, has been worked by generations of miners. Over the years, a maze of tunnels has slowly been excavated, some of which now reach hundreds of metres down under the ground. But until this century, nobody knew that a beautiful but deadly hidden world lay right next to the Naica mine.

In 2000, brothers Juan and Pedro Sanchez were digging for silver in the mine when they broke through a rock wall into a vast cave. The inside of the cave was a surreal world of huge crystals that dwarfed the men. The crystals, the biggest of which turned out to weigh 55 tonnes, grew at angles across the cave and glimmered in the light of their lamps.

The heat and humidity in the cave was so high that the men soon left – probably in the nick of time before being overcome by the lethal atmosphere. Two days later an iron door was installed – to stop anyone from going inside. However, one miner did enter the cave later. He might have hoped to take some pieces of crystal from the cave, but he can't have understood the dangers. When his body was later found, it had been slowly cooked by the intense heat and humidity.

Temperatures of over 65°C have been measured in the main cave, and the humidity is nearly 100%. As a result, it's impossible for the body to cool down. Unable to cope, the body diverts a lot of blood to the skin in a futile attempt to lose heat. Because of this, you lose consciousness as the brain is deprived of oxygen. Then you die.

In 2006, an international team of scientists led by Italian Paolo Forti conducted a series of expeditions to explore the cave, which people had by now called 'The Cave of Crystals'. Due to the intense heat and humidity, the scientists carried oxygen and wore specially designed clothes which had ice in them. Even with this equipment, exploring the caves nearly proved to be fatal.

It was difficult and dangerous for the explorers to climb over the crystals and make their way through the cave. What's more, they couldn't go slowly because the ice in their suits quickly melted. After that time, they became dangerously hot and had to retreat to specially cooled tents in the main mine.

Despite these difficulties, the scientists were able to map the main caves, take samples and analyse the chemistry which had led to this amazing environment. It turns out that the Cave of Crystals is actually three linked caves – one much bigger and hotter than the other two – and possibly there are more caves nearby. The crystals are made of a mineral called selenite. Over hundreds of thousands of years, the caves had been periodically flooded by water rich in the mineral gypsum. The heat produced by underground volcanic activity had turned this gypsum into glass-like crystals of selenite. The longest crystal found was nearly 12 metres in length, and it had probably been growing for about half a million years!

Paolo Forti's team mounted twelve short expeditions to the mine in 2006. Even so, the cave system hasn't yet been fully mapped. Since 2006, nobody has dared to go back there but no doubt one day explorers will. The Naica mine is still in use, but the door to the staggeringly beautiful and equally lethal Cave of Crystals remains firmly shut.

Student work and travel placements can be great for your English – and great fun too. But do your research, writes Fabrizio Melegari.

Global catastrophe is one of Hollywood's best-loved themes, but how realistic are disaster film scenarios? Read on for our reality check.

A A sudden climate change

In the film The Day after Tomorrow, a weather circulation system over the Atlantic referred to by scientists as AMOC shuts down. This plunges Europe and North America into a sudden and severe ice age. The film was put down as rubbish by scientists at the time of its release in 2004, but a new study by the University of Southampton and the Max Planck Institute is making people reconsider.

Using sophisticated climate modelling programs, researchers calculated that climate change caused by carbon emissions could indeed cause AMOC to shut down – cooling the planet instead of warming it for a period of about 20 years. What is unrealistic in the film, however, is the speed and severity with which this happens. However badly climate change affects AMOC, it won't happen in the way depicted in the film.

B A zombie attack

Films such as Resident Evil and The Walking Dead portray embattled heroes fighting for their lives against a plague of killer zombies. Whatever Hollywood says, it's impossible for dead people to rise up from the grave. But could some future disease infect people and control their minds, turning them violent? Worryingly, some biologists think so.

Some mind-controlling diseases already exist, such as the parasite toxoplasmosis. This makes mice lose their fear of cats – the parasite needs the mouse to be eaten by the cat in order to complete its life cycle. Interestingly, human studies show that whoever becomes infected with toxoplasmosis tends to become bolder and take more risks.

Another virus already exists which causes people to become violent, and even bite others: rabies. Luckily, rabies is difficult to get, but viruses evolve over time and change. If one day rabies became as infectious as flu, it would be time to arm yourself and lock the doors!

C A meteorite impact

Asteroid impacts are another favourite Hollywood theme – with blockbuster films featuring planet-killing rocks that hurtle towards Earth, only to meet their match in a heroic astronaut like Bruce Willis in Armageddon or Robert Duvall in Deep Impact. These tough-talking, good-looking heroes always manage to save us, only to die themselves after a suitably moving farewell.

The fact is that Earth has been hit by many big asteroids in the past – and will be again. A huge asteroid wiped out the dinosaurs 65 million years ago, causing worldwide destruction. So the big question is, when will this happen again?

What astronomers know is that there are millions of asteroids out there. A really big one could hit us at almost any time – but statistically it isn't likely for thousands of years. By that time scientists hope to have figured out a way to deal with them – either destroying the asteroid or changing its orbit so it flies harmlessly past Earth.

Is it possible that there are intelligent aliens somewhere out there, on a distant planet far from Earth? ¹ _____ we've learned about the universe in the last few decades certainly suggests ² _____. The question is, will any of them ever visit Earth? And what would happen if they did?

SETI is a scientific organisation ³ _____ searches for intelligent alien life. A division of SETI ⁴ _____ the Post Detection Task Force has plans in place for what to do in the event of alien contact. These basically involve contacting the United Nations and scientific agencies, sharing data, and working out how to respond. The military would be the last ⁵ _____ involved. The thinking behind this is simple: any aliens who actually manage to cross light-years of interstellar space and get here ⁶ _____ developed technology that is far more advanced than ours. ⁷ _____ weapons they have will be incomparably better than ours, so attempting to fight them would be futile.

At the end of the day, ⁸ _____ we can hope is that any aliens who do visit us will turn out to be friendly – more like the gentle creatures in the film Arrival than the killers of Independence Day.

Writing

5 Read the task. Then write a report of 220–260 words. Remember to plan your paragraphs before writing.

You have been asked to write a report about how ready your school is to deal with an emergency such as a fire, flood or earthquake. In your report, you should examine what facilities and equipment your school has (e.g. emergency stairs, fire extinguishers, etc.) and how well staff and students have been prepared for an emergency (e.g. first-aid-trained staff, emergency drills, etc.). Evaluate your school's preparations and make recommendations to improve them.

Discursive Essay / CAE Part 1 Essay

Your class has watched a TV documentary about the negative effects of CCTV surveillance on society. You have made the notes below:

Effects of surveillance:

- the loss of privacy and freedom
- the decline in 'real' policing
- the lack of crime reduction

Some opinions expressed in the documentary:

- 'You cannot escape the cameras even if you are doing nothing wrong.'
- 'The authorities use CCTV cameras as an excuse for reducing the number of police officers on the streets.'
- 'Cameras are intended to reduce crime but there is little evidence that they are effective.'

Write an essay (220–260 words) discussing two of the effects of surveillance. You should explain which effect is more important, giving reasons in support of your answer.

Over the past few years, especially after recent terrorist attacks, public safety has become an important issue. It is undoubtedly true that the use of video surveillance (CCTV) has increased, but it is also true to say that this is not without drawbacks. This essay will take a closer look at two of the main disadvantages of video surveillance.

The purpose of security measures is not only to keep people safe but also to instil confidence in the general public. In this respect, CCTV is a poor substitute for good neighbourhood policing. Indeed, there is even some evidence to suggest that the presence of CCTV cameras makes people feel less secure, because they associate the cameras with high-crime areas. And yet, for financial reasons, police numbers continue to be cut, while CCTV surveillance increases.

There is another problem with the spread of CCTV surveillance which concerns our rights as citizens. We are surrounded by cameras throughout our everyday lives, even when our activities are entirely law-abiding. This represents a significant infringement of our civil liberties. Cameras which are installed to prevent crime can also be used to monitor our behaviour in other ways.

While the appeal of using video surveillance as a security measure is understandable, the potential dangers are, in my opinion, too great. The risk to civil liberties is the more important of the two issues discussed in this essay, because widespread surveillance threatens our way of life and our privacy. Individual freedoms and rights which took centuries to achieve should not be sacrificed so easily.

- Make sure your essay covers all the information requested in the task. Remember to organise the information into separate paragraphs.

- In the first paragraph (the introduction) establish the topic for your essay, alluding briefly to any recent events or trends that are relevant. Outline the structure of your essay to help the reader follow your argument.

- Remember that you will be assessed on the range of language you use as well as its correct use, so do not limit yourself to simple vocabulary and structures.

- Try to develop your points wherever possible, using appropriate linking words to introduce the additional information.

- Your essay can include opinions from the task, but try to express them in your own words. (This sentence rephrases the first opinion in the task.)

- In the final paragraph (the conclusion) sum up your opinion. If the task requires it, include a clear statement of which point you consider more important and why.

Discursive Essay / CAE Part 1 Essay

Your class has had a discussion about the possible uses of space travel in the near future. You have made the notes below:

Possible uses:

- finding new planets to inhabit
- space tourism
- searching for natural resources

Some opinions expressed in the discussion:

- 'Earth will become less habitable because of climate change.'
- 'As space travel gets cheaper, it will become a popular leisure activity.'
- 'Other planets and moons could definitely provide a rich source of precious metals.'

Write an essay (220–260 words) discussing two of the uses of space travel. You should explain which use is more important, giving reasons in support of your answer.

It is more than half a century since humans first ventured into space, and we now appear to be on the verge of a new era in space travel, as private companies develop new kinds of re-usable space craft. In this essay, I will discuss two different aspects of this imminent revolution in space travel.

Space tourism is already becoming a reality and a handful of extremely wealthy individuals have paid to experience the adventure of space flight. As new technologies are developed, this opportunity is sure to become more affordable. Naturally, safety will be a concern initially, but with time, space craft will become as safe as aeroplanes and it is possible to envisage an era when adventure holidays on the Moon are commonplace.

Aside from tourism, other uses for space travel will certainly emerge over the coming decades. At some point in the future, it may become necessary for humans to leave Earth, owing to climate change, nuclear war or simply over-population, and to live in space or colonise another planet. The first steps towards this are already being taken, as NASA prepares for a manned mission to Mars. Moreover, studies are continually being undertaken to assess how humans might cope with life in a space colony.

Enthralling as the possibility of holidays in space may be, the quest for other habitable planets is undoubtedly more important as it concerns the very survival of the human race. It seems certain that, at some point, our species will expand beyond Earth. Whether this happens by choice or through necessity remains to be seen.

- In your introduction, it may be a good idea to place the topic in its historical context.

- If you are writing about the future, use a range of appropriate grammatical forms, including will, modal verbs and set phrases like 'be bound / sure / certain to'.

- Make sure your essay is written in an appropriately formal style. This is likely to include passive forms. Avoid colloquial language.

- Try to display a good knowledge of topic-related vocabulary.

- Your essay will achieve a higher mark if you use a variety of sentence structures, including subordinate clauses where appropriate.

- When writing about future possibilities, you may wish to conclude with a rhetorical question or open-ended remark.

Review

Your college magazine would like students to submit film reviews for the next issue. They would like these reviews to focus in particular on whether films would appeal to older teenagers. You decide to write a review of two films you have seen, one of which is very appealing to older teenagers and the other much less so. Write your review (220–260 words) in an appropriate style.

In 2017, two films were released which attempted to capture the older teenage market: The Mummy, starring Tom Cruise and Russell Crowe, and It, based on a Stephen King book familiar to many older teenagers. Universal Studios, who produced The Mummy, have announced that it will be the first in a series of films known as Dark Universe, while a second instalment of It is already being planned.

The film It tells the story of an evil clown who kills children in a small American town. A group of teenagers, known as 'The Losers' Club' because they are all victims of bullying, come together to fight the demon. The film is brilliantly directed, with the cinematography and lighting adding to the terror. There are moments of comedy too, which lighten what is admittedly a slightly over-long film.

In The Mummy, an ancient princess awakens from her tomb beneath the desert. As the victim of betrayal centuries earlier, she now seeks to inflict a terrible revenge on the modern world. The film has an all-star cast and is a true Hollywood blockbuster. Although the storyline is rather far-fetched, many older teenagers will enjoy the mix of action, adventure and fantasy.

While I found both films enjoyable, I would recommend It rather than The Mummy for older teenagers, partly because of the age of the protagonists, but also because of the gripping storyline and excellent acting. Stephen King himself considers the film It a triumph and I am confident that most older teenagers would share his opinion.

- In the introduction, mention the titles and a few other key facts about the film or films you are reviewing.

- In the following paragraphs, describe the film(s): include a plot summary and mention some of the strengths and weaknesses.

- A film review should include some film-specific vocabulary: plot, cast, cinematography, lighting, and so on.

- Use appropriate adjectives, either positive or negative, to describe aspects of the films: gripping, far-fetched, (un)convincing, fast-/slow-paced, and so on.

- Keep in mind the specific audience for your review that the task mentions. It may be a good idea to mention this explicitly in your conclusion.

Report

As part of a temporary summer job, you recently accompanied a group of teenage students from your country on a two-week study holiday in England. Your manager has asked you to write a report evaluating the trip from both your own and the students' perspectives and suggesting improvements for next year's trip.

Write your report (220–260 words) in an appropriate style.

Report on the two-week study holiday in England

Introduction

The aim of this report is to evaluate the trip from the students' point of view, as well as from my own perspective as an employee. It is based primarily on my own opinions but also reflects conversations with several students during the two-week stay.

Overall assessment

The trip went smoothly and provided the students with an enjoyable opportunity to improve their English and broaden their knowledge of the culture. I felt able to offer support and advice to the students where necessary and no major problems were encountered. The small team of employees collaborated effectively.

Specific strengths and weaknesses

The host families provided friendly and comfortable accommodation, though several students would have preferred a more central location. Although the English tuition was felt to be of a high standard, several students felt that their progress was hampered by being in large, mixed-ability groups. As far as the organised activities were concerned, students enjoyed some excursions more than others, and were generally frustrated by the lack of time available for shopping and relaxation.

Recommendations

There are several changes that I would suggest for next year's trip to England.

- Ensure that host families are located as close to town centres as possible.
- Reduce the size of the groups for English tuition.
- Eliminate the least popular excursions to allow more free time for students.

These adjustments would ensure an even better experience for the students and for the employees who accompany them.

- It is appropriate to give your report a title. For clarity, you may also wish to add a sub-heading to the start of each paragraph.

- In the first paragraph, give the aims and objectives of your report and explain where you are drawing your information from.

- Decide how best to divide up the information in your report and organise your paragraphs accordingly. Remember that a simple, logical structure is easier to follow.

- In a report, it is often better to soften negative comments with more words than necessary (periphrasis) or by not being direct (euphemism).

- Finish with clear recommendations if the task requires you to make them. Use bullet points, if you wish.
